AUTO GAS KILLS 2 IN GARAGE

SOUTH END YOUTHS DIE IN THEIR SLEEP

Bodies Found Huddled Together on Seat of the Sedan Where They Were Stricken

Two boys met death today—gassed in a garage in the rear of No. 69 Montgomery street, South End.

One was Thomas Duffy, twenty years old, of that address. His stepmother runs a boarding house. The other victim was his chum, Edward Medawley of Chicago, who lived with the Duffys for two nights.

Both slipped into the garage to sleep some time early today. They slept in a sedan car.

About noon, when a colored chauffeur opened the door to take out the car, he found the bodies, huddled together on the floor.

They had died, then slipped off the cushioned seats.

Almost ashen with fright, he ran into the Duffy residence and told Mrs. Duffy. She summoned police. Efforts at resuscitation failed.

Both bodies were hurried to the City Hospital. There death was pronounced as due to gas asphyxiation, presumably from the deadly carbon monoxide gas.

HE'S 16 AND HAS A BRIDE WHO'S SEEN 49 SUMMERS

BURTON S. TUCKER

BOY HUSBAND IS FACING ARREST

South Essex, Dec. 3.—Can a husband be arrested for being a delinquent child?

Just because Burton S. Tucker of South Essex—he's the postmaster's son—married his great-aunt, Susan Simpson, wealthy New York hotel owner, his parents today made ready to have him arrested on a charge of delinquency.

"He's not really married to her," said Mrs. Joseph Tucker, Burt's mother, today. "A boy of his age couldn't marry a woman of her age or any other age without consent of his parents. She will use all the resources of her wealth to keep him, but she cannot buy our consent. If we failed to have the marriage annulled, we will have Burton brought back here on a charge of delinquency."

Strangely enough, Burton Tucker's leap into a marriage of wealth is in keeping with the journey his middle-aged wife took many years ago. She was the daughter of poor Gloucester folks. Spurning the town the moment her frocks were lengthened, she fled to New York. There she "went on the stage."

As a chorus girl she travelled the land and learned her book. She learned it so well she captured the love and hand of a wealthy New Yorker. Since then she has never been without money. Once she ran a lodging house in Lynn. She made it pay so well, she bought a hotel in New York.

BRIDE WED 4 TIMES

It was a gold mine. A couple of marriages are said to have taken place in the interim of her first New York catch and her recent trip to the altar with child Burton. One husband was a Dr. Joseph Simpson. He died overseas, a major in the British army.

Burton and his brown-eyed Susan were married in New Jersey. Because of the boy's age authorities

SHAKEDOWN BARED BY BERMAN

Owner of Old Higgins Hotel His Story in His $50,000 Suit Against Coakley

Myer Berman, former hotel owner suing Daniel H. Coakley, disbarred Boston attorney for $50,000 charging that he was "shaken down" for that amount by Coakley in the early days of the famous Blackmail Ring's activities told the story of the alleged shakedown in Superior Court today.

Berman names William J. "Big Bill" Corcoran as having had a part in it. Corcoran is awaiting a new trial on blackmail charges with seven other defendants, alleged members of the ring.

Berman was part owner of the Higgins Hotel at No. 30 Court street. A son was in business with him. Another partner was Isaac Gordon.

What Berman testified today has already been brought out in previous blackmail airings, a report of former Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

ANOTHER IS ACCUSED OF GRAFT

Sullivan of Charlestown Station Said to Have Tried to "Shake Down" Autoist

Two Boston patrolmen were discharged today. Another is facing trial before a board of three captains.

Robert F. Briggs, attached to the East Dedham street station, and Dennis Kelleher of City Hall avenue station, lost their jobs, and Matthew J. Sullivan of the Charlestown station is facing trial for attempted bribery.

Briggs was found in a house raided by liquor officials in Davis street, South End.

Kelleher reported for duty in a suspiciously happy frame of mind, and was pronounced "under the influence" when examined by a doctor.

Sullivan is charged with having attempted to impose a fine of his own on an automobile driver who was in the wrong in connection with an auto accident.

The "fine" was to have ameliorated the outraged feelings of law and order, and to have prevented Sullivan, a former well-known amateur boxer, from reporting the accident.

The driver refused to pay the "fine" and reported the accident and the attempt at bribery himself.

REPORT BROKERS SHORT $500,000

The shortage in the accounts of Tucker, Anthony & Co., State street banking and brokerage house, as revealed in Saturday's American, will run well into $500,000, it was reported today. A member of the firm, however, insisted the amount involved is trifling.

Four employes, accused of complicity in responsibility for the shortage, have been discharged.

These men, when accused of defalcations, refused to admit their guilt and declared they were tools for someone "higher up."

WOMAN FINED $1,000 IN 'STRAW BAIL' CASE

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien's fight against "straw bail" and irresponsible bondsmen yielded a woman victim today. She is Mrs. Virginia Dellelo of No. 65 Stoughton street, Hyde Park, arraigned before Judge Walt in Superior Court on a charge of perjury and fined $1,000.

Mrs. Dellelo made false statements as to her property when she went bail for Joseph Condello, under indictment for robbery and believed to be a fugitive from justice. Save for the fact that she is the mother of six children, District Attorney O'Brien would have moved for a jail sentence in the case.

WOMAN GIVES BLOOD TO SAVE STRANGER

Cincinnati, Dec. 3.—Physicians at the General Hospital here said today that James Cavanaugh had a new chance for life through the sacrifice of a woman who never before had met him nor even heard of him.

Mrs. Margery Hana, acting just for the "sake of humanity," went to the hospital gave a quart of blood to Cavanaugh, who is suffering from anemia.

TO OUST HARRIS AND TIGHE, REPORT

United States Attorney Robert O. Harris.

Assistant United States Attorney Joseph V. Carroll.

Deputy United States Marshal James A. Tighe.

The removal of Harris and Carroll is scheduled, a dispatch says, because of the lax manner in which liquor cases have been prosecuted here. Tighe is to go because he seized liquor for which he is technically responsible has vanished from the Federal warehouse. There is no

GETS YEAR IN JAIL FOR THEFT OF CENT

In Judge Parmenter's session of Municipal Court today Scott Harriman was sentenced to one year in jail for stealing a cent—and he didn't even get the cent.

Special Officers Hartigan and Mullen of the Lagrange street police were patroling the streets to protect the Christmas shoppers from pickpockets. They saw Harriman, who has a record in that line of endeavor, and followed him.

Presently they watched him lift the purse of Miss Marie Curran of Lynwood street, Roxbury, who was walking with her mother, and sneak off in the crowd. A moment later the police had both the "dip" and the "poke."

The latter was found to contain one cent.

LYNN BOY, 7, KILLED UNDER COAL TRUCK

Archie Stevenson, a seven-year-old Lynn schoolboy, was crushed to death by a heavy coal truck on Broad street, that city, today. The accident occurred in the presence of more than a hundred of the boy's schoolmates, many of whom became hysterical at the sight.

The truck, owned by the J. P. Lamper Coal Company, and driven by Asa N. Waitt, was turning from Atlantic street into Broad street when the boy ran off the sidewalk, directly in front of it. The wheels of the truck which, with its load, weiged seven tons, passed over the boy, killing him instantly.

CHARGE HUSBAND OF 16 KIDNAPED BY HIS RICH BRIDE OF FIFTY

PARENTS PLAN ARREST OF YOUTH AS DELINQUENT

are now investigating the validity of the license. They stepped over to New York to honeymoon, spending their first day at the home of Maxine Hilfot, No. 1 half for a country postmaster's son!

Mrs. Simpson gave her age when wed as forty-two years. Birth records at Gloucester place it as fifty-two. She is the aunt of her husband's mother.

Strangely enough after Burt and Susie reached the Simpson cottage to continue their honeymoon there came the young husband's parents. They stayed and apparently had a pleasant visit. It wasn't until they got back home that opposition to the marriage developed.

Then they persuaded Burton to return to the old homestead, it came. But on Armistice Day, November 11, came a big limousine with strange men and a veiled woman.

LAVISHED WITH GIFTS

It pulled up at the home of a boy chum of Burton's. The young husband was called outside, then bundled into the machine and sped away. Who was the veiled lady? the folks who hang around Essex's postoffice have asked since. Was it Burton's scorned bride?

Figuring in that mysterious flight of Burton's was a boy who also figured in his marriage, one John McGinnis, eighteen years old. He came back to town from New Jersey "loaded with money," he remarked, shedding greenbacks gloriously. Said he had acted as best man for Burt and "got plenty of cough" for doing so.

They say she captivated young Burton with gifts of automobiles and jewels. He once worked for her in Gloucester where she maintained a summer place. He drove her cars. Now a chauffeur will drive them together.

In Ridgefield Park today the honeymooners cooed in the bride's little cottage at No. 112 Orchard street, and defied parents and the world to separate them. They received a reporter for the American without ado.

"We are planning to go South", said the bride.

"But we will visit my folks down East if they get over their foolishness and arrange to receive my wife," said the groom. He cast a loving glance at the lady at his side.

HUSBAND PROPOSED

"We were married on Oct. 2," added Mrs. Tucker, "and are very happy. Reports that we paid a lot of money for a marriage license are simply rot. We paid $5, no more. We were married by a preacher here and as far as I can see there's nothing for anybody to get excited about. Since when was love governed by age?"

"You said it, Sue," murmured the groom.

"Is it true that you gave your husband $10,000?" Mrs. Tucker was asked.

"It is," she replied, "but it is a trust fund payable only at my death."

"Have you any message for your folks?" she groom was asked.

"Tell them I would rather go to jail than leave my wife," was the reply.

"I did the proposing," added young Tucker, who by his wedding is reported to have secured control of an estate said to be worth more than a million dollars.

MRS. JAMES M. CURLEY.

"The efforts of my father to have my marriage annulled will prove fruitless. I love my wife and will stand by her."

Contrast this to the statements given by his parents here today. Said his mother:

"He's just one of this strange woman's many fads. My son is unusually good looking and of athletic build, a jovial boy with winning ways. She became infatuated with him and made us think she was taking an auntly interest in him when she lavised money, sport automobiles, clothing and jewelry on him.

'TRICKED,' SAYS MOTHER

"After she had tricked him into a marriage and he grew tired of her and returned home she virtually kidnaped him and brought him back and she is holding him now because she has threatened the boy by making believe it is 'necessary' for them to be married."

Young Tucker's health has been seriously impaired, said his father. "He appeared to me as though he was a victim of drugs."

7TH SON COMES TO HOME OF CURLEY

In introducing Mayor James M. Curley last night at his Monroe Doctrine Centennial address, John Sherard, 3rd, of the Shepard Stores, announced that a nine-pound Democrat, the seventh son of the Mayor and Mrs. Curley, had been born.

The new baby is the seventh son and the ninth child in the Mayor's family. Mrs. Curley and the young Democrat are reported as "doing well." With the arrival of the son, Mayor Curley cancelled all engagements for today after he delivered his scheduled radio address.

REVIEWS HISTORY.

In the course of his address, Mayor Curley traced the history of the Monroe Doctrine since its promulgation on December 2, 1823, at the time the Holy Alliance was contemplating establishing Maximilian of Austria in a French empire in Mexico to the present.

"The Monroe Doctrine has served us well and it must be strongly supported to serve us in the future," Mayor Curley declared. "Europe is as grasping today as she ever was; she still looks with greedy eyes upon the fat lands and rich possibilities of America; her methods, not her purpose, have changed. Eternal vigilance is still the price of freedom.

RECRUITING HIRELINGS.

"Europe no longer ships her Hessians to crush Liberty; she can buy her cager mercenaries on American soil; she can recruit her hirelings from behind bar, press and pulpit, college and counting room, to preach the creed of colonialism and anti-Americanism, to poison sources of knowledge and education, pervert the gospel of Americanism; and she can pay these recruiting officers in the fields of treachery and treason with money generously, even though thoughtlessly, given by America.

"Let us with dignity and finality advise bankrupt Europe and her money changers American hirelings that the Monroe Doctrine is as potent and palpitant today as when Monroe formulated it and Lincoln, Cleveland and Roosevelt thundered it."

REPORT 700 ARE DEAD IN FLOOD IN ITALY

Milan, Italy, Dec. 3 (I.N.S.).—Seven hundred dead, it was estimated today, was the toll of the flood from Gleno Lake which inundated the valleys of twenty miles to Lake Iseo.

Bergamo, Italy, Dec. 2 (AP).—One hundred thirty-seven bodies have been removed from the Bergamo Valley country, 600 of whose inhabitants are believed to have been drowned when the great dike impounding the waters of Gleno Lake collapsed Saturday.

Troops and civilian rescue parties worked throughout the night in the mud and water seeking the victims of the deluge over an area of fifty square miles, and endeavoring to give and comfort to the thousands who have been made homeless.

The minister of public works and the secretary of war have left for the scene to direct the rescue work, while King Victor Emmanuel and the sub-secretary of the interior are expected today.

Hundreds of homes, including the entire villages of Dezzo, Corna and Buezzio, were wiped out by the ten million cubic yards of water that rushed from the artificial glacial lake. The course of the flood was stopped at Lake Iseo, 15 miles away.

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 3.—Morris Adler had an argument with his mother-in-law.

As a result he is under guard in the hospital with bullet wounds and facing arrest on charges of burglary and grand larceny, his wife is under arrest on the same charges, his brother-in-law is being held without bail charged with first degree assault, and his father-in-law is under arrest charged with having received stolen goods.

The mother-in-law, Mrs. Jerome Cortwright, today was the only member of the family clear of the toils—but she is under surveillance as a material witness.

Adler struck the woman with a suitcase when she objected to his distribution of stolen goods, police say. Walter Cortwright, 17, her son, shot Adler. Cortwright, arrested, confessed his father, Jerome Cortwright, had received Adler's stolen goods and the father was brought to jail. Mrs. Florence Adler visited her husband in the hospital and promptly was arrested by his guard.

Police, searching the family's tree-hidden shack home near the Albany-Schenectady highway, said they found buried in the cinder floor of the garage suitcases containing goods stolen from Schenectady homes. Mrs. Adler was recognized as the woman who acted as lookout for a man who Friday last robbed a home of $400 in furnishings.

WHITE HOUSE IS UNSAFE; ASKS $400,000 TO FIX IT UP

Washington, Dec. 3.—The White House has been declared unsafe. Conditions there are such as to require that immediate remedial measures be taken to prevent a possible calamity.

These disclosures were made today by Major General Lansing H. Beach, chief of engineers of the army, in his annual report which says:

"The interior upper portion of the Executive Mansion has indicated a condition which renders the building unsafe, both from the standpoint of security in the structural features and the fire hazard present."

Congress is asked for $400,000 for the work of reconstructing the interior portion of the famous building to make it secure.

FORD CONFERS WITH COOLIDGE ON MUSCLE SHOALS OFFER

Washington, Dec. 3.—Henry Ford, who came to Washington today to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission at hearings affecting his railroad properties, had a brief conference with President Coolidge, discussing, it is understood, the status and disposition of the administration toward his offer for Muscle Shoals.

Mr. Ford reiterated that his offer for Muscle Shoals, now pending before Congress, stood. Beyond admitting the question was discussed with the President during the twenty-minute conference, he would not disclose what details were considered.

On leaving the White House, Mr. Ford was asked if he cared to make a statement as to his attitude toward a nomination for the presidency. His only comment was:

"Nuts!"

Mr. Ford was then asked if he wouldn't put it more politely. He would be funny, wouldn't it?"

Mr. Ford and his party also called on Secretary of War Weeks.

DEBUTANTES RUN BIG HOTELS IN N. Y. FOR CHARITY FUND

New York, Dec. 3.—Society matrons and debutantes today took over the operation of two of Manhattan's largest hotels, the Commodore and the Biltmore, and through doll auctions and fashion shows hoped to pour wealth into a charity fund. In lobby of the Commodore Cyril Maude, the actor, was the auctioneer of the dolls. Miss Sheila Burden was in charge of the sale, with the Misses Consuelo and Muriel Vanderbilt, Joan Whitney, Adele Hammond, Alice Astor, Mary Stevens and Frances Norton as assistants.

Miss Margaret Lawrence was the prima donna of the fashion show in the Biltmore. The dining room and novelty shops, candy counters and floral shops of both hotels were taken over by the society women.

SCHOONER BLUENOSE FOR SALE; SKIPPER ASKS FOR BIDS

Halifax, Dec. 3.—Owners of the Bluenose, whose skipper refused to Sail to abide by the decision of the committee directing the international fishermen's sailing race, have decided to sell the schooner.

Captain Angus Walters, as managing owner, announced today that at a meeting of shareholders held over the week-end he had been instructed to call for bids. He said he also had been directed to keep fish reboilers advised concerning any legal action he contemplated to obtain the international trophy of which he asserted he had been wrongfully deprived.

Walters refused to re-sail a race after the racing committee held he had passed the wrong side of a buoy.

GOMEZ'S BANANA COUP FAILS, BUT HE DOESN'T KNOW IT

Providence, Dec. 3.—"But there are no bananas in America except mine," protested George Gomez staggering under two enormous bunches of the green fruit which had impeded his progress from the deck of the Fabre liner Britannia to the State pier today.

George said everywhere in Lisbon he had heard America's lament about the banana shortage, and he thought to turn an honest penny here by investing a small fortune in the fruit ere he quit his native land for the United States.

Despite the mirth excited by his appearance with the bananas, George refused to believe that his financial coup would not be entirely successful.

SPEEDING AUTO HITS WOMAN IN BROOKLINE; RUNS AWAY

Two automobile accidents were reported by the Brookline police today. Patrolman Rutledge heard a woman scream as he was patrolling his beat near the Chestnut Hill reservoir station, and found that Mrs. Leslie Alexander had been knocked down near Boylston and Hammond streets. The motorist sped away without stopping.

FLO LEEDS ASKS MRS. STILLMAN TO BUY A HAT

New York, Dec. 3.—Mrs. James A. Stillman, back in the city today after months in the wilds of Quebec, declined to comment on her husband's recent publication of the so-called "confession" letter. Neither would she say whether she would buy a hat from Mrs. Flo Leeds, who is in the millinery business.

Mrs. Stillman is confident of victory in the Appellate Division in Brooklyn, Wednesday, when Mr. Stillman's appeal to set aside his wife's victory for herself and baby

FLO'S LETTER.

Mrs. Stillman was at her [illegible] at Fifth avenue and Seventy-second street, when the hat question developed as the result of the following letter sent by Mrs. Leeds, now a saleswoman in an East Forty-Eighth street shop:

"Mrs. James Stillman:

"I am sure you have already selected your dressy hats, but are you still in need of something smart for country wear or walking? For these occasions you might find in my attractive model here, where I am in attendance each day.

"Perhaps baby Guy Stillman is ready for some scampy Winter suits. Ours are adorable and reasonably priced, too.

"Won't you let me help you select some for him? I assured a position here the beginning of the season and as I am working on a commission basis I shall be very grateful for your patronage.

"Sincerely,

"Florence Leeds."

When Mrs. Stillman was asked if she planned any purchases, she said:

GOING BACK TO QUEBEC.

"Well, I think it is very creditable of her. I am glad to see that she is trying to do something for herself and for Jay Ward Leeds, especially the boy. I would be the last person in the world to try to hurt anyone, you know. I am not built that way. I am glad, very glad, to see her making money that way. I am glad, too, to see her climbing up and not climbing down."

Mrs. Stillman will not be in court on Wednesday when the argument is called. She plans to spend at least ten days here in the city doing some shopping. Then she will return to Grande Anse, to celebrate an old-fashioned Quebec Christmas. James "Bud" Stillman, her oldest son; Alex Archer, the second, and Baby Guy, with his governess, Miss Oliver, will spend the holidays with Mrs. Stillman at the Lodge, which is tucked away on the St. Maurice River, thirty-five miles from anything except woodchoppers' camps.

MATRON SAVES FOUR DOCTORS AT FIRE

Vigilance on the part of Matron Rose Oppenheimer of the Jewish Maternity Clinic, No. 18 Allen street, West End, saved four physicians sleeping in the building from suffocation by smoke and fire, when they were no patients in the clinic at the time.

Mrs. Oppenheimer was the first to notice the building was being filled rapidly with smoke and discovered the fire in the basement. She ran to the upper stories and aroused Dr. Maurice Kafan, Dr. John D. Bennett, Dr. William H. Bennett, Jr., and Dr. C. L. Barbaria.

Dr. Kafan, clad only in pajamas, ran to a fire box and gave the alarm. The fire was confined to the basement and the examining laboratory on the first floor.

5 ARRESTS ORDERED IN RUM TRUCK CASE

Federal warrants for the arrest of Jacob Cooperstein, Samuel Orenberg, William Horst, Aaron Goldstein and Louis Simon, were issued by Judge James M. Morton today after the men had failed to appear to answer to charges of conspiracy and transporting liquor. The five were arrested by Prohibition Agent Williams and other agents on the road from Scituate when the two trucks in which they were transporting 3,016 gallons of Belgian alcohol had been stopped by State police.

move needless code interference that President Coolidge will urge Congress in his forthcoming message to pass laws that will be calculated to ameliorate the nuisance.

His message will say to Congress: "Revision is needed of the laws regulating radio interference."

PETITIONS OF INTEREST.

The circulation of petitions to the President by readers of the American and the other Hearst papers has aroused great interest in Washington, where the interference is nearly as pronounced as in Boston.

Many of their constituents have urged their Senators and Representatives to do something to clear the ether. These folks back home describe the conditions, and the representatives here in Washington tune in their own set to listen to those easily available everywhere and get the direct proof themselves of the need of new radio regulation.

The employes have not been arrested, and it is understood no criminal action will be taken against them.

The defalcations were discovered some time ago, and the National Surety Company, who bonded the banking house, was notified. Auditors were placed on the books.

The discharged employes are said to have declared they took no active part in speculations carried on in their names. They charged that a person connected with the firm had been trading in stocks for a long time and that the company's credit was used to protect a heavy list of securities carried on margin.

The discharged employes were well-known in State street, one of them having been with Tucker, Anthony & Co. for thirty-two years and another for twenty-five years.

len giving much of the alleged shakedown in detail.

FIGHTS OWN CASE.

Assisting in prosecuting Berman's suit today Joseph H. Warren, assistant attorney general. His presence, it was said, was to care for certain papers belonging to the state labelled "important" in the trial of Corcoran and others.

The trial is before Judge Wait. Coakley is fighting his own case assisted by W. Minot Hurd. There is no jury.

Berman testified today:

"It started in October, 1916. Police Lieutenant McDevitt, then attached to the office of District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier came into the hotel one day and said, 'Pelletier sent me here to get the hotel register.' He grabbed it and walked out.

"Corden, my partner said, 'We'd better see Coakley.' He took me over to Coakley's office. Coakley said, 'I'll have to see Pelletier and see what it is. Come in tomorrow.' We did. Coakley said 'Pelletier will phone you tomorrow.'

CALLED PELLETIER.

"We went back to Coakley's office again. He said, 'I'll try and see if I can settle that case. You come in tomorrow.'"

Q.—Did Coakley call Pelletier that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did he say? A.—He said, 'Joe, don't do anything about that case till I see you. Don't indict Berman and his son.'"

Berman continued: "Then he told us to come in the next day. 'I'll have the plaintiff in my office,' he said.

"Next day when I went there with Gordon, Coakley was there, also Bill Cleveden. Coakley said to Gordon, 'I want you to treat these people right. They are nice, respectable people. I know 'em. What will it take to settle this case?'

ASKED $50,000.

"Corcoran said, 'Fifty thousand dollars.'

"I said, 'I haven't got $50,000. What is it for?'

"They didn't say but they went into another room and when they came out Coakley said: 'The best I can do is $35,000.' I said, 'Mr. Coakley I haven't any money. What is it all about?' Coakley said, 'I know all about it and I advise you to settle.' I said, 'I haven't any money.' Coakley said, 'You've got a son in the leather business. He can help you out.'

"'You'll have to settle,' he added, 'or they'll indictyou and your two sons.' I called up my son Sam, but he was in Brockton. Then I called my other son, Louie, at the hotel and told him to bring me a bank check. He did so and I gave Coakley a check for $3,500, Coakley saying I better give them something."

BORROWED THE REST.

Q.—Did Coakley say anything as to what might happen if you did not pay it? A.—Yes, he said, "The Grand Jury is in session. If you don't settle right away they'll indict you." I saw my son Sam later and got $15,500 from him. Then I went to the United States Trust Company and borrowed the rest of the $35,000."

Q.—How was the money paid by Sam, checks or cash? A.—Checks. Sam turned the checks over to Coakley.

Q.—Did you ever ask or a receipt? A.—Yes and Coakley said, "Never mind. It's in my hands and I'll take care of it."

TO OUST HARRIS, TIGHE, REPORT

LIQUOR STORES VANISH.

Investigation by special department of justice agents following publication in the Boston American of June 18 of charges concerning the alleged disappearance of the $250,000 "Con" Keefe liquor from the government warehouse.

This investigation has revealed that not only the "Con" Keefe liquor but that practically all other liquor supposed to be at the Massachusetts Storage warehouse has disappeared. One Federal official is quoted as saying that not $2,000 worth of liquor remains of what should be in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 worth of seized contraband.

Former Prohibition Director William J. McCarthy was in Washington last week giving evidence as to the "disappearing booze." McCarthy is said to have presented a half dozen affidavits from as many Boston druggists, naming the man from whom they purchased liquor stored at the government warehouse. It is possible that criminal action will be taken when the reports of the investigators are assembled.

The investigators also reported to Washington the manner in which liquor cases have been prosecuted by Federal officials in Boston. It is said that this phase of the case has interested supporters of President Coolidge.

Prominent women's organizations of Boston became interested in the law enforcement situation here some time ago and demanded jail sentences for violators of the Volstead law. The remarkable record of Attorney Daniel A. Shea in defending liquor law violators has been much commented upon. Shea is a former assistant United States attorney and a former law partner of Andrew U. S. Attorney Joseph V. Carroll.

Another report that was made to Washington concerning the situation here had to do with a party at a downtown hotel last April. Many Federal officials attended the party, including Harris, Carroll and Tighe. Attorney Shea was also there, as were a number of prominent Republicans. According to those who were present, much liquor was consumed during the night and one prominent Federal official became so intoxicated he had to be taken home in a taxicab.

In connection with the "Con" Keefe liquor and other high grade booze that has been removed from the warehouse the investigators reported that the first of the liquor was taken from the warehouse in trucks to a lonely spot in the country. Here the good liquor is alleged to have been siphoned from the containers.

The containers were then taken back to the warehouse, it is said. Later, the investigators say, the removal was accomplished in the warehouse by use of the siphon process and the liquor taken away in other containers.

The lady puts $10,000 in trust for the young husband when he reaches twenty-one.

THE BOY'S parents, shocked, plan to set aside the marriage.

Yet the widow only carried out Plato's idea. He thought middle aged women should keep very young warriors out of mischief by looking after them. There is no greater parental problem than the management of a boy from fifteen to marriage.

IN THESE days, by the way, a woman of fifty is no older than a woman of thirty-five in the old days. That generous widow should extend that $10,000 trust to the boy's fortieth year. Twenty-one is the worst age for getting $10,000 in a lump. The average boy at twenty-one is a baby.

WAKE UP, Henry Ford, and get to work on cheap, safe flying machines. They are selling them in Germany, all metal, safe, doing sixty miles an hour on less than a gallon of gas for sixty miles. Price, $1,199.

Farmers, salesmen buy the machines by thousands.

FORD could sell them for $500. America needs them, Texas especially. Where is the young Ford to do for America in the air what Ford has done on earth?

NOTHING like trouble, to make you think. In Berlin, heavy trucks with regular gasoline engines are run with gas produced from charcoal, and it works better than gasoline.

A small cylinder filled with charcoal supplies to the engine gas and power enough to run a heavy omnibus for seven hours.

There is a new use for the farmer's wood. Make it into charcoal. Fill up your combustion cylinder, run your tractor all day—no carburetor; no gasoline bill.

YOU know that about 70 per cent. of the world's automobiles are in the U. S. A.

Did you know, also, that New York city uses more telephones than all of Great Britain and Ireland?

This is an up-to-date country—wonderful in mechanical efficiency.

But it doesn't do enough thinking apart from material problems.

THE FARMERS will be interested to learn that in 1923 the Chicago Board of Trade sold more than three thousand five hundred million bushels of May wheat alone and about eight thousand million bushels of wheat for all delivery.

The Board of Trade men say that selling more wheat than crop, is in the world, sometimes while, gives the farmer a steady market.

UNITED STATES government informs Europe that it doesn't wish to enter any "restricted inquiry" into Germany's ability to pay.

Germany's ability to pay is none of the business of this government. We are interested in the paying ability of nations that borrowed billions from us by war. Apparently they are not much interested in that.

The amount that can be got out of Germany by nations that conquered Germany is not our affair.

IT ISN'T likely that anything serious will be heard from now on about dragging this country into the European mess. The 1924 campaign has begun. Politicians have at least learned that the League of Nations issue would be about as valuable to a man running for office as a wreath of poison ivy.

THERE ARE nearly seven thousand million dollars in our savings banks. Deposits have increased more than five hundred millions in the last year. That sounds prosperous. Savings banks depositors alone, if they drew out their savings all at once, would call for nearly all the money in the country—only eight billions is the total.

DEADLOCK IN NEW CONGRESS

RE-ELECTION OF GILLETT BLOCKED

G. O. P. Insurgents Halt Organization of Congress to Enforce Demands

Washington, Dec. 3.—The Progressive bloc made good its threat to throw the House into a deadlock over election of a Speaker. On the first ballot no candidate received the necessary majority.

Washington, Dec. 3.—Facing an organization row at the very outset, the sixty-eighth Congress convened at noon today for a session that promises to write a colorful chapter in the history of legislation and politics.

The militant Progressive block, holding the balance in the scale of votes by virtue of the greatly reduced Republican majorities, raised the flag of insurgency in the House by threatening a deadlock in the election of a Speaker.

While on the Senate side the opening formalities passed off with the usual outward calm and decorum, the threat of a fight to force reorganization of the Senate and some of its more important committees was in the background.

PROGRESSIVES MEET.

For an hour before the House went into session, the Progressive bloc had been in conference.

"There will be no election of Speaker today," said Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, chairman of the group, after the meeting. He reiterated that the bloc controlled enough votes to prevent the reelection of Speaker Gillett, but declined to say how long the insurgents expected to hold out.

"Our real fight," he said, "will come later when we seek to modify House rules."

The Senate Democrats also held a conference and elected Senator Robinson of Arkansas as chairman Democratic floor leader, and Senator Walsh of Montana as vice-chairman. Senator Pittman of Nevada was nominated for the Democratic candidate for president of the Senate, and Senator Gerry of Rhode Island was re-elected party whip. Senator King of Utah was named secretary of the Conference.

DEMOCRATIC POLICIES.

J. Edward Halsey of Virginia was nominated by the Democrats as candidate for secretary of the Senate, and John J. Burns of Monticello, N. Y., was selected as candidate for sergeant-at-arms.

"While we are not prepared and do not propose at this time to assume the responsibility which devolves upon the majority to take the initiative respecting the details of legislation," said Senator Robinson afterward, "it is expected that our organization will stand for a material reduction in public expenditures.

"The transportation question is worthy of careful study and decisive action. Practical and well-considered measures for the relief of conditions among farmers will receive sympathetic attention. Proposals advanced for the adjustment of international conditions are to be disposed of without partisanship."

La FOLLETTE ABSENT.

Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, the recognized leader of the Progressive bloc, was the only absentee when the roll was called in the Senate. He had been ill for several days and probably will be unable to attend Senate sessions before next week. The new Senators and those re-elected at the last election took the oath of office, administered by Senator Cummins, while crowds which overflowed the galleries looked on.

Mrs. Coolidge, wife of the President, was seated with several friends in the President's gallery.

Balloting for Speaker in the House was delayed while the clerk went through the long formality of calling the roll, by States, to determine whether a quorum was present. The galleries there were packed, too, the crowd extending into adjoining corridors.

The Senate adjourned at 12:45 p. m. out of respect for members who have died during the adjournment.

Vast Majority Leave Home Because They Feel Justified by Conditions, Irene McAuliffe Finds

Why do young girls leave home? Why do young brides run away from their husbands? What becomes of these girls and these brides? What are the pitfalls and quagmires in Boston which await them? Who is to blame for the runaways and the thousands of tragedies that follow?

Boston's policewomen have written a series of intimate vivid stories for the Boston American on this problem—one of the greatest problems facing the police and the parent today.

...These stories tell of the dangers these young girls and women encounter when they reach Boston. They tell of the maelstrom of sin that lies waiting to suck in the young innocents the moment they reach the city. Strikingly, vividly, they paint a picture that every mother should read.

Miss Irene McAuliffe, who has spent years in the police departments of Boston and Washington, has written the first installment, which begins today.

MISS IRENE McAULIFFE

BY IRENE McAULIFFE

As a rule I do not go into the sensational and seamy side of police work when I am talking about my profession. I usually believe that the less said about the seamy side the better, and I do not like to read about prisons and girls who are started on the wrong road.

But the influence of the "jazz age" is becoming so overwhelming, and so many thousands of young girls are being swept into a life that is worse than death, that I cannot refrain now from painting a picture which I hope will prove a warning beacon not only for the girls and young wives, but for the mothers and young husbands as well.

FEW WHITE SLAVES

In the first place I want to explode the old belief that there are hundreds of girls kidnaped and dragged into involuntary white slavery by designing men and women.

In my humble opinion there is virtually no such thing as involuntary white slavery in this section of the country today.

Stories of abductions and kidnaping are sound thrilling and make wonderful reading matter for the sensationally inclined. But I believe I could count upon the fingers of my two hands the number of actual cases where young girls or young wives have been held against their will. Of course there are some, but mighty few.

When frantic mothers, bewildered fathers, nervous husbands and solicitous friends come to me with reports of missing girls or young wives I have no stock question which I ask first. It is:

"What was the argument all about?"

CAUSE IN HOME

No matter what the story; no matter how seemingly true the tale of abduction, I ask that question first. For I have found that there is always a good reason in the mind of the girl or young wife for running away. She feels justified or she would not have gone.

The story of how she must have been dragged into an automobile and carried away against her will to a life of shame makes no laugh. For except in very, very few instances, it is not true. That young girl or that young wife has gone away voluntarily and because she thought she had an excellent reason. Whether her reason was a good one will be left to your judgement. Form your own conclusions from the stories I intend to relate in this series.

I have found that one of the causes for most missing girls and runaway wives can be found in the home. Most of these causes could have been avoided by the parents or the young husbands if they had only taken the time to think what was awaiting their loved ones once they stepped forth into the world alone.

GIRLS MISUNDERSTOOD

Of course, many of these causes are purely imaginary in the minds of the young girls and wives. But both the parents and the husbands were told many times by the young girls, and the danger signal was not heeded.

The fundamental cause that lies behind the missing girls and runaway wives today is the age. This is the jazz age, and the spirit of the jazz age courses through the veins of these young girls and wives.

The young people of today are not the same as they were twenty-five or even ten years ago. I don't say they are wilder, or faster, or more susceptible to temptation. I only say they are DIFFERENT. They are more sophisticated. The girl of sixteen today knows about things that her own mother has no notion of, things that many mothers have never heard or dreamed of.

COULD BE PREVENTED

With the young girls years ahead of their mothers in knowledge of the things of life, is there any wonder that so many of them are missing? The mothers do not understand them. They do not know what thoughts are running through the supposedly childish brains of their daughters. The daughters rebel against certain rules laid down by the mothers.

The mothers stand pat; and in a short time the telephone rings at police headquarters and a frantic mother is telling of another missing girl, many times telling how her daughter must have been abducted and is now held a captive by a white slave band.

If that mother in the vast majority of cases had sat down and tried to see the viewpoint of her little girl, the telephone call would not have come into police headquarters, for the girl would probably have stayed at home.

And the same thing is true in the case of the young wives. They are suffering from the jazz age. There is a small spat between them and the husband. The husband does not realize until too late. The telephone at police headquarters rings again. Again there is a tale of an abducted wife.

If I am assigned to the case I ask my old, stock question:

FACE DIRE FATE

"What was the argument all about?"

That is the starting point for the investigator. Cast aside the timeworn theories of white slave kidnaping and look at home for the trouble. Then go out and search in the quagmires and sloughs that wait to suck in these young and innocent girls and wives. They exist in Boston, as in all great cities. And the girls and wives will eventually find their feet drawn into the maelstrom if they are not found before it is too late.

BANK TELLER TO REVEAL SECRETS

Declares He Will Bare Financial Transactions of Prominent Maynard Men

John A. Garlick, twenty-five-year-old Maynard Trust Company teller, who fled from Maynard several months ago with a young Concord woman after a shortage of approximately $24,000 had been discovered in his accounts, comes before Judge Whiting in Middlesex Superior Court today for sentence.

Garlick is in an angry mood and threatens to "expose" certain men who are prominent in the financial life of the mill town whence he fled under a cloud.

"I will tell who it was who took advantage of poor, ignorant foreigners who were induced to buy American Woolen Company stock out of their savings, and who then entrusted it to bankers to sell for them," said Garlick today.

"Working people bought the stock on instalments out of their wages, paying $60 a share for it. When it went up to $80 they were induced to sell, but very few of them got as much as $73 for their shares. I know where that other $7 went and I intend to tell."

"DOUBLE-CROSSED."

"I can tell stories of certain bond transactions that will put some Maynard people in a different light before the world."

Garlick is bitter because, he says, he was double-crossed. He is angry because his family was unnecessarily humiliated at the time of his disappearance. He declares that his sister, who was a stenographer in the bank, was compelled to write letters concerning her brother's defalcation which might have been written by other stenographers and saved his innocent sister pain and humiliation.

Several Maynard business men were expected at Cambridge to plead with Judge Whiting for clemency in the sentencing of Garlick. The sentiment in the town seems to be that he has suffered enough and that he will become a worthy citizen of the community if he is placed on probation.

Attorney Robert Gallagher, counsel for Garlick, said today that before Garlick's arrest the Trust Company officers agreed to ask the court to place Garlick on probation if he would plead guilty and make restitution.

GIRL STICKS BY HIM.

Acting on the promise he induced Garlick to surrender. In spite of this, he says, the bank officers appeared at the East Cambridge Court last Tuesday and asked that the defaulting teller be given a long prison sentence.

Miss Florence Booth, Garlick's fiancee, has stood by him from the beginning and has never lost faith in him. If he is put on probation the couple will probably marry by Christmas. Garlick said today:

"Florence is the best pal a man ever had. I know she will stick to me whatever happens. If I am sent to prison it will simply mean a postponement of the wedding. And, God bless her, I will never fail her again."

Among Garlick's best friends in Maynard are Frank Ferns, proprietor of a drug store, and his brother, Miss Mary Ferns. They will appear before Judge Whiting and ask for clemency in the sentencing of Garlick. Miss Mary Ferns says that Garlick was led astray by the example of older men who were "getting away with it."

Miss Ferns said Garlick frequently handled sums of money for persons who left it for deposit at the drug store after banking hours, and not a cent of it is missing.

"BIG ED" FUREY IS REARRESTED AT JAIL DOOR

Arrested as he left Plymouth County Jail, where he had just served an eight months sentence for impersonating a federal officer and raiding the homes of wealthy residents along the North and South shores, "Big Ed" Furey was before Judge Ralph W. Reese, in Lynn Court today to answer for an offense alleged to have been committed against Francis Spinelli, last Spring.

Upon the request of Chief of Police William A. Quinn, of Swampscott, the case was continued until Wednesday. Quinn said he is having difficulty locating two witnesses who live in Boston. Furey's attorney J. Frank Williams, opposed the continuance.

'Big Ed' Furey

Furey was charged with the larceny of this from the Spinelli home, No. 62 Street, Swampscott.

Waiting for Furey when the Spinelli case has been disposed of, is a New York warrant in the Lynn Court, for "Big Ed's" arrest in connection with New York City's famous million dollar bond swindle, alleged to have been plotted and executed by "Nicky" Arnstein. Furey is said to have been a member of the "Nicky" Arnstein gang.

Furey was arrested by Lieut. Daniel Gallagher and Detective Sergeant Thomas Hurley, of the Boston police, on a warrant charging him with the theft of $1,000 worth of jewelry from the home of Mrs. Ida Goldstein, 1 Commonwealth Road, Newton, on Nov. 15. Furey was held in $1,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

Furey was arrested in a room at the Hotel Touraine, Boston, where he had registered as Edward Furey, Jr., of Swampscott. Police found in his possession a diamond ring, a watch and chain, a gold cigarette case and a gold bracelet, all of which Mrs. Goldstein identified as her property.

Furey was arrested in Boston on Nov. 16 by Lieut. Gallagher and Detective Sergeant Hurley, on a charge of receiving stolen goods. He was held in $1,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

FIND SKELETON; SOLVE 8-YEAR MYSTERY

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 3 (Universal).—The eight-year-old mystery of little Jimmy Glass' disappearance was finally cleared up when the bones found under a brush pile near Greeley by Otto Winkler were identified by Charles Glass, the boy's father.

Jimmy was wearing overalls and a pair of "Coward" shoes on that Spring morning in 1915 when he ran out of the house to play. And among the few grim effects that had withstood that long siege of the elements were two brass fasteners and part of a shoe sole on which the word "Coward" was faintly discernible.

SOUGHT WORLD OVER.

Mr. Glass, who came from Jersey City, his home, after being notified of the find, considered the evidence complete. It was for him the wind-up of a ceaseless waiting and a ceaseless searching over all parts of the world. For since his son's disappearance Mr. Glass has followed clews to South America and Europe.

It is now assumed that the lad, who was then only four, got lost in the woods and after wandering around for hours succumbed to fright and exhaustion.

Jimmy's father, however, still holds to the belief that the boy did not wander away and die of starvation, but was murdered by kidnapers, who buried his body into the swamp.

Otto Winkler, the farmer, was hunting near Greeley when he made his tragic find. He kicked a hard object and looking down found it to be the skull of a child. Searching a little farther he found two tiny rotting shoes with the feet bones of a child in them. He immediately marked the spot and carried his news to Greeley.

FIND MORE BONES.

The citizens of that town, knowing that the Glass family were spending the spring in Greeley that year and that little Jimmy Glass was the only child who had ever been reported missing in that region, immediately came to the conclusion that it was he.

He has manned a fortified position near the city and is destroying bridges and railways to delay Federal forces sent against him and led by Generals Francisco Urulejo, Luis Gonzalez, Tomas Tostano and Francisco Maycotte.

General Francisco Mugica, claimant to the Governorship of Michoacan, who upset the government of Sanchez Pineda in Morelia, the capital, has been arrested by Federal forces under orders from the district court. Strike Big Gas Well

Morgantown, W. Va., Dec. 3.—A gas well, flowing more than 4,000,000 feet a day, has been brought in in the "Big Injun foot field," near Mount Morris, Pa., by the Shannon Creek Oil Company. The gas was found in the Big Injun sand, ninety-seven feet from the surface.

MARCONI SEES DIRECTION CONTROL

London, Dec. 3.—Signor Marconi, pioneer in the field of wireless communication, today declared his belief that a revolution in the methods employed for communication with distant countries would be possible as the outcome of tests carried out by himself and C. S. Franklin, the British expert.

The inventor made his announcement at a meeting of the wireless telegraph company, over which he presided.

He said that, according to the new system, the electric waves carrying the messages were projected and propagated in a beam which was turned in any desired direction as opposed to the present system whereby the waves are sent out in all directions.

Communication had been successfully carried on by the new system between England and St. Vincent, at the Cape Verde Islands, a distance of 2,250 nautical miles, he asserted. Only a fraction of the electrical energy hitherto found necessary was employed.

PS COLLEGES THAT RE NON-CHRISTIANS

President Clifton D. Gray of Bates College, Lewiston, Me., rapped colleges which allowed men who are not Christians to serve on their faculties, in Hoke before the Baptist ministers' Chipman Hall.

"I do not ask what Christian denomination a professor belongs to, but do want to know that he is a Christian before he instructs the youth of our colleges," said President Gray.

THE FISHBONE FROM LORD BYNG'S THROAT

TROOPS GUARD WITNESSES IN PROBE OF BOY'S DEATH

Catskill, N. Y., Dec. 3 (I.N.S.).—A heavy guard of State troopers today was thrown about witnesses going before the Grand Jury investigating the strangling to death of Howard Rothenberg, seven-year-old Newark, N. J., boy at Windham last August.

Leaks from the Grand Jury room and through witnesses are responsible for the presence of the troopers, according to District Attorney Coffin.

Two of the witnesses are Anna Siobin, sixteen-year-old nurse for the family of the slain boy, and Detectives John Sweeney of Newark, employed by Charles Rothenberg, the boy's father, to investigate the mystery.

GUARD NEGRO HELD IN SLAYING OF PRETTY YOUNG WIDOW

Indianapolis, Dec. 3.—John Thomas Shaw, 24 years old, negro, is being held here today charged with the slaying of Mrs. Helen Whelchel, attractive young widow, whose battered body was found lying between railroad tracks beneath a bridge, from which it apparently had been buried.

Police indicated it might be necessary to remove Shaw from the local jail because of feeling aroused by the slaying.

The arrest of Shaw was made after a watch, property of Mrs. Whelchel, which had been pawned, was traced to him. A blood-stained automobile belong to Shaw and in which it is believed Mrs. Whelchel was abducted, has also been found by police.

Two other negroes, Jerry Sykes and James Kelly, and a negress, Clara Smith, are being held with Shaw.

AMUNDSEN HEARD FROM; RADIO ENGINEER'S DEATH

Copenhagen, Dec. 3.—Advices from Christiana say that Captain Raold Amundsen's exploration ship Maud, which is believed to be drifting toward the North Pole with the Arctic ice packs, has established radio communication with Spitzenbergen.

Captain Wisling reported that Engineer Stevensen died on July 10 last after an illness of several months, presumably of inflammation of the brain.

The Maud was in communication with Spitzenbergen early last March, reporting that she was then about 300 miles northeast of Wrangell Island. She left Seattle in June, 1922, carrying Captain Amundsen and an exploration party, but Amundsen later left the vessel to make preparations for his airplane flight across the North Pole, which he subsequently abandoned.

MAIL FLIER FIGHTS FOR LIFE WHEN WRECKED IN ROCKIES

San Francisco, Dec. 3.—Clair K. Vance, air pilot, returned to San Francisco today from Placer County, California, where he was forced down three days ago while flying from San Francisco to Reno with mail for eastern points. Vance, a veteran flier, said his experiences while wandering about in unfamiliar territory, seeking a way back to civilization out of the wild Placer County country, were the most harrowing he ever had. His airplane was wrecked. He was forced to spend Friday night in a raging storm with only candy for food. He finally obtained a pack mule and made his way to Colfax.

'GOSH, I LOVE HIM!' SAYS GIRL ELOPER

Mother or husband?

Loyalty to the past or promise of the future?

Remain with the known or plunge into the unknown?

A decision had to be made, and it was made.

Sixteen-year-old Dorothy Rogers Wragg went to her husband for the two-fold reason, "Gosh, I love him!"

Everyone "rushed" her.

But there more favored than others, but it was a fairly even score as far as Dorothy was concerned, although her mother was rather fond of a certain boy who had been going with Dorothy for over a year. In fact, mother probably had a side bet on him.

GEORGE WINS RACE.

Then out of Everett came dashing George Wragg. The race was over.

"We fell in love at first sight," Dorothy asserts. "I didn't care for anybody else after that."

They met at the home of a mutual friend and their love grew deeper. They decided to marry. When a twenty-one-year-old boy there are at twenty-one-year-old boy there are bound to be objections.

"Hang the objections," George decided. "Let's elope!"

And they did. A sympathetic justice of the peace in Portsmouth performed the ceremony and they came back. Trouble began. Dorothy's mother charged Dorothy with being a stubborn child.

"Mother was afraid that I would want good times and that I would become unhappy. She was worried about the future. I'm so young that she thought I wouldn't give up the things I might have to give up."

The case came up in the East Cambridge Court and Judge Stone after talking with Mrs. Rogers, permitted Dorothy to make her own decision.

JUDGE KNEW HER MIND.

"The judge knew how I'd decide. I married George because I loved him and I wasn't going to give him up. Mother was willing it should be this way. I was awfully happy at home, but I want to be with George always. I've seen happy marriages and I've seen unhappy marriages, and I feel sure that mine is going to be a happy one. George isn't the first man I've liked. I've known and liked loads of others, but George is the best of them all."

So, in a pretty four-room apartment in Everett, George and Dorothy are going to begin their journey into the future of promise, and Dorothy, because she has seen other voyagers, is convinced that their ship will sail smooth seas.

Tokio—Because twenty-two is regarded by the Japanese as an unlucky age for marriage, and Princess Nagako, who is to marry Crown Prince Hirohito will be twenty-two February 4, it has been decided the wedding shall take place in January instead of February.

In Fist Fight

MAY LAVELLE.

Following a verbal battle and a fist fight with her sweetheart, May Lavelle took poisonous medicine in her South End boarding house. She is on the danger list at City Hospital. Thomas Duthrean of Wollaston is the man in the case.

GIRL TAKES VIAL OF POISON IN LOVE ROW

A violent quarrel, followed by a fist fight with her sweetheart in front of her home, so angered May Lavelle, twenty-six years old, that she rushed into the lodging house at No. 46 Concord square, South End where she is temporarily boarding, seized a bottle of a poisonous medicine and drank its contents.

Mrs. Harriet McKenzie, the landlady, probably saved Miss Lavelle's life when entering the room she snatched the bottle from the girl's mouth.

According to neighbors, Miss Lavelle and Duthrean rode up to the house in an automobile. A loud verbal battle disturbed the quiet neighborhood. A fist fight ensued, and after several blows the girl rushed into the house.

There, according to Mrs. McKenzie, she remarked: "He hit me here (pointing to her heart) there's no use living" and seized the bottle of poison.

Mrs. McKenzie knocked the bottle from her mouth.

FUNERAL OF FIRE CHIEF M'DONOUGH

St. Mary's Church, Charlestown, was filled today with city officials, members of the fire department and relatives and friends of the late Fire Chief Peter F. McDonough, the occasion being a requiem mass for the repose of the soul of the old fire fighter, who died at his home on Winthrop street last Friday.

The solemn high mass was celebrated by Rev. James L. Davey, assisted by Rev. Michael J. Murphy and James A. Donnelly. Other clergymen within the sanctuary were Rev. John W. McMann, D.D., pastor of St. Mary's; Rev. James H. Phelan, Rev. John V. Cronin of Beachmont, Rev. James A. Hurley of Swampscott and Rev. Maurice F. Flynn of Roxbury.

Among those present were Mayor James M. Curley, Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn, Fire Chief John O. Taber, 200 firemen and many men and women prominent in the community.

The pall bearers were District Chief H. J. Powers, Captain T. J. Lannary and C. H. Long, Lieutenants J. H. Laughlin, William A. Donovan and John H. Williams, all close friends of Chief McDonough.

The interment was at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury, where Rev. Fr. Flynn conducted a burial service.

WOMAN OF 75 HELD ON LIQUOR CHARGE

A seventy-five-year-old woman, Leah Weinrober of No. 158 Bowen street, Chelsea, was arraigned in the United States Court today together with her twenty-one-year-old son and four other young men all charged with conspiracy, possession of liquor and manufacturing liquor.

Prohibition Agent James R. Shopley, who headed a raid, found two 200-gallon stills, 75 gallons of liquor and 3,000 gallons of mash in the Weinrober house. Mrs. Weinrober and her son Israel, together with Barney Rubenstein, Phillip Goldberg and Louis Speigel of Boston, and Jacob Margolis of Winthrop were held in $500 bail each for trial.

WILLETT JURY USES GLASS ON 'ALTERED' DATE

The trial of the $13,000,000 lawsuit brought by Willett, Sears & Co. against Robert F. Herrick and others was resumed in the Superior Court at Dedham today, after a four-day adjournment for the Thanksgiving holidays. Attorney Sherman Whipple for the plaintiffs is trying to show by Alfred B. White that Robert F. Herrick was the person who substituted certain notes against Willett, Sears & Co. and George F. Willett in person, and that they were designed to force Willett and his partner into bankruptcy.

The suits were not instituted in the name of Herrick, but the plaintiff insists that he was the real owner of the notes on which the action was begun.

A paper relating to the receipt of certain stocks in the Daniel Green Felt Company, signed by Kidder, Peabody & Company and F. S. Moseley & Company, was introduced and Attorney Whipple said that the date had been altered and that certain lines int it were indistinguishable. The paper was handed to the jury, who examined it under a microscope. The foreman took to paper to a window and examined it closely. Judge Callahan, the presiding justice, then directed that all of the jurymen do the same.

When questioned whether he knew that Herrick owned certain Willett notes, the witness said Herrick had told him that Jacigen & Curtis had picked up the notes in the banks for a syndicate. He said that he did not know that Herrick owned these notes.

The witness said that he did not know that Herrick's law firm was counsel for the Daniel Green Felt Shoe Company, nor knew that the same firm was counsel for F. S. Moseley & Company.

Help that Lame, Achy Back!

Is that dull, throbbing backache making you old and miserable? Are you lame, stiff and achy; tortured with stabbing, rheumatic pains? Do you feel tired, weak, all worn-out—as if you just can't keep going? Then why not look to your kidneys as so many Boston folks have done? Weak kidneys, you know, cause many mysterious aches and ills. That's because the kidneys are the blood-filters, and once they fall behind, blood and nerves are upset and the whole system put out of tune. You suffer constant backache, sharp, knife-like twinges, and annoying kidney irregularities. You are apt to have headaches, dizzy spells and inclined to be nervous, irritable and depressed. Don't wait! Help your weakened kidneys before it is too late. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are endorsed by many Boston folks. Ask your neighbor!

Read How These Boston Folks Found Relief:

MRS. W. MURPHY, 22 Linden St., Somerville, says: "Being on my feet long made my back lame and very Sharp, stabbing pains cut into the small of my back and I was all out of sorts. I had dizzy spells and headaches and my kidneys acted too freely. I was nervous and irritable, too. Four boxes of Doan's Pills relieved me in fine shape."

GEORGE KEIST, 51 Appleton St., says: "I was bothered with severe pains through the small of my back and I had to get up often at night, as my kidneys were disordered. I was troubled with headaches and spells of dizziness, too. I saw Doan's Pills advertised and three boxes knocked that pain out of my back and rid me of the other symptoms."

MRS. ANNIE LANDERS, 645 E. Second St., South Boston, says: "My back was so bad I had all I could do to stand. Every time I moved, a sharp, stabbing pain cut into the small of my back. My kidneys acted irregularly and I had headaches, too. Doan's Pills from Lee's Pharmacy drove all the trouble from me and the cure has lasted."

COMMUNITY STORES OPENED BY BOSTON'S GAS COMPANY

Afford Close Contact With All Customers—Direct Personal Service and Advice—Fifteen Stores Now in Operation—Others to Follow

"The Boston Consolidated Gas Company's aim is to maintain close personal contact and friendly relations with its customers," an official of the company stated in an interview. To accomplish this it has tried out a number of plans, among which is the establishment of community gas stores at which every convenience to be found at its main office, 149 Tremont street, Boston, is available.

Dana D. Barnum, President of the Company, in discussing the company's newest plan to bring about closer relations with the company's customers, pointed out that years ago in the consolidation of smaller companies into large ones, sometime there had been a tendency to lose the personal element between the customer and the company, due to the increase of area served.

"Personal contact," he said, "is the principal trade asset of the corner grocery over its larger competitors. It is the psychological something that appeals to the customer and cultivates his friendship. "With the coming of efficiency methods, consolidation and the elimination of duplication in management, with the resultant improvement of service and the reducing of production costs, this close contact with the customer was lost to some extent.

RESTORING FULL CONTACT

"Though this tendency to get out of touch with the customers has not been so marked in the growth of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company as with some other organizations, during the last few years we have been endeavoring to maintain full contact with the customers."

Thoroughly equipped stores have already been established in 15 sections of Greater Boston. Others are to follow with specially trained employes in each. It is the Company's purpose that no customer be allowed to remain dissatisfied with the treatment accorded him and every employe is required to do his utmost to please the customer, no matter what the customer's difficulty may be.

These stores, all thoroughly equipped and prepared to show the customers everything in the gas appliance line, are in addition to the many agencies throughout Greater Boston where customers may pay their gas bills. They are distinctly Gas Company stores and not a part of some other store. The bill-paying stations are to remain, though the customers may pay their bills at the new community Gas Stores or at the main office, or by mail, as they have heretofore.

It is the purpose of the executives to bring the Gas Company to the people, to make it more nearly like the community gas business that it has succeeded. Trained salesmen will extend every courtesy to the company's customers, showing and explaining to them all the hundreds of gas appliances so necessary to the comfort, happiness and economy of the home.

PERSONAL INTEREST IN CUSTOMERS

The managers and other employes of these store will be close to the people and are expected to become personally acquainted with the customers in the neighborhood, giving them the real human man-to-man service that the corner stores afford. Every want of the customer will be attended to and a special interest taken in every case.

Attendants in the stores are all specially trained for their work in the Boston Consolidated Gas Company's Institute at the Boston University School of Business Administration and other stores are smaller editions of the company's main store at 149 Tremont Street, Boston.

Customers may telephone the community Gas stores by calling the main office, Beach 7060, where 27 trunk lines are available, or call the special telephone number of each store. On holidays, Sundays and nights the main office should be called for information.

"These are some of the measures the Boston Consolidated Gas Company is taking to remain in close relation with our customers," said President Barnum. "By reason of the fact that the company has 240,000 customers in the area it covers, it is impossible for the executives to know personally all the customers, but it is the duty of the store managers and their assistants to know them and give personal attention to their requirements. If any questions arise that the store manager cannot attend to he is directed to get in touch with his superior and the matter is to be carried along until it is properly attended to, even if it becomes necessary to put the question up to the President of the Company. No effort is spared to satisfy and please the customer."

PINCHOT NAMES PLAN FOR COAL REGULATION

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 3.—Details of his plan for a compact of States to regulate the anthracite coal industry, which Governor Pinchot proposed last Monday at a conference here of representatives of anthracite consuming States, were made public by the Governor today.

The complete outline was sent last night to the other executives, together with an invitation to another meeting here December 13.

The compact, the Governor's outline said, after being ratified by any States, could become effective in the ratifying States when consented to by Congress. Governor Pinchot proposed it then do, among other things, the following:

Declare the coal business within the ratifying States a public utility.

Create a joint commission of five if the Federal government does not ratify the compact and seven if it does, the President in the latter case to appoint one member and the Governor of Pennsylvania, in any case, to appoint one, the others to be chosen by ratifying States.

Create a Pennsylvania coal commission consisting of the Pennsylvania member of the joint commission as chairman; the chairman of the State Public Service Commission and the State Attorney-General; the commission to have wide powers to investigate, and regulate the industry.

He proposed to confer on the joint commission greater powers, giving it the right to investigate all phases of the business, such as costs, profits, wages and salaries; authority to fix prices and to require uniform accounts and reports and to fix standards of coal; power to license dealers and to apportion the coal supply and to recommend to the Interstate Commerce Commission changes in freight rates and allotment of railway facilities.

The plan also would give the commission the right to raise revenue for salaries and expenses by a special tax per ton.

LA FOLLETTE R. R. PLAN REJECTED

Washington, Dec. 3.The Interstate Commerce Commission today refused a demand that it reconsider all of its work in the physical valuation of the country's railroads.

Petitions making such a demand presented by the National Conference on Valuation of American Railroads, which is headed by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, were dismissed.

The commission's decision held it practically impossible to find the facts as to the expenditures actually made by railroads in the period of their early history.

Commissioners Eastman and McManamy dissented. Commissioner Potter, although concurring in the decision, suggested the commission had taken "far too seriously the burden of finding the original costs."

GARY SEES 1924 AS PROSPEROUS YEAR

New York, Dec. 3 (N.E.A.)—America should find 1924 a more prosperous business year than 1923, despite conditions abroad, for Europe can influence but not control trade and industry in this country, Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, said in an article in the current issue of "System" released for publication today.

"There is nothing in sight to cause apprehension for next year," Mr. Gary said. "Prosperity will come, unless the progress of the United States be artifically arrested by ourselves and without good reason."

BUTLER TO MANAGE COOLIDGE CAMPAIGN

BRITISH BEAUTY IS FEARFUL OF STAGE FRIGHT

New York, Dec. 3.—"I know I shall have frightful stage fright. The very thought of appearing before an audience terrifies me."

These were the words of Lady Diana Duff-Cooper, better known as Diana Manners, heralded as one of the most famous and beautiful English aristocrats. Lady Duff-Cooper arrived here on the Aquitania to play the part of the Madonna in the Max Rheinhardt version of "The Miracle." The play will be produced under the management of Morris Gest at the Century Theatre during Christmas week.

In an interview at the Hotel Ambassador, where she and her husband are staying, she spoke of her stage experience:

"This is quite an epoch in my life for this is my first visit to America and also my first appearance on the stage. I have made two motion pictures but that is quite different from having to appear personally before the public.

"I shall have no words to speak. My entire role is pantomime.

"I don't expect to engage in many social activities while here. I shall spend most of my time on the stage. After the run of the play is over I shall probably be homesick and quite ready to go home again."

$70,000 LOSS IN BLAZE AT ANDOVER

Andover, Dec. 3.—Five horses were burned to death and four men narrowly escaped when fire destroyed the big stables of John F. McDonough on Park street early today. Damage is estimated at $70,000.

Fergus Ross, Chester Pelky, Henry Vaillancourt, William Kinney, employes of McDonough, were asleep in the barn. They were awakened by the neighing of the horses. They found themselves surrounded by flames.

Fighting their way to safety the men notified the central fire station, directly across the street. They returned and led some horses to safety, but five of the animals were cut off by the flames.

In a short time the two-and-a-half-story wooden structure was a mass of flames, and, for a time, the centre of Andover was threatened with destruction. Help was called from Lawrence and Ballardvale.

The water pressure was poor and this added to the danger of a spread.

A one-and-a-half-story cottage near the barn was scorched.

"TAY PAY" TO SEEK U.S. FUNDS FOR STUDENTS

London, Dec. 2.—T. P. O'Connor, "Father of the House of Commons," in an address before the Irish Literary Society, intimated he would visit America to obtain help for the rising generation of Irish in Great Britain. He said Irish boys and girls who had won scholarships valued at 20 pounds had been obliged to give them up because that sum was insufficient to meet their expenses and he planned to start a fund to assist such students and if necessary would go to America to solicit support.

CHAUFFEUR KILLED BY N. Y. COP IN ROW

New York, Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—Henry A. Crabtree, 28, a chauffeur, was shot and killed early today by Policeman Michael Topf. There was an altercation between six men in a taxicab and men on a truck. The men in the taxi were alleged to have taken several bottles of milk from the truck. Topf said he saw one of the men leap out of the taxi and make for the truck. He thought it was a holdup. As he jumped forward, Topf said, the taxi driver tried to run him down and he fired.

BEADS control the ever-swaying pendulum of the Paris fashion clock right now. Amber colored, jade or rhinestones, beads are being used on crepe, on georgette, on velvet, as backgrounds and foregrounds, as highlights and shadows, as ornamental decoration and lavish design, on light and dark colors, on black and white, in many and varied shades and hues.

The fashion world has gone bead mad. Everywhere in every shop nilady is confronted with beads, beads and more beads. Dresses for dinner, dance, afternoon or evening are virtually "painted" with beads of every color and description. Roses in large design, however, comprise the bulk of such affectation.

UNDER the playful whims of the electric lights beads are in their true worth, transforming a gown from the sheer simplicity of daytime into radiant brilliancy and sparkling gorgeousness of evening. This is the newest of the many effects ardently sought for at present by Parisian creators. Simplicity is the keynote of daytime frocks while luminous splendor, that of the evening.

Military neck and ruffled side drapery when used at the same time is exceptionally clever and smart as well as truly elegant. The finely frilled lace jabot and row of buttons are soft touches ingeniously devised by demureness of style. Of mouse-grey velvet, the pictured frock possesses all the newest elements of the prevailing mode.

NEVER before were the neck and sleeves of a gown such essentials as fashion has decreed them today. Milady is especially troubled with them when trying to be distinctive and individual, for a poor sleeve spoils an otherwise artistic gown or a neck ungainly to the wearer destroys another effect.

In a simple serge dress, a long tight sleeve is very good. And when laced up the side in fine red silk cord, the frock is doubly enhanced. Such a touch is both unusual and attractive. A sleeve of such design is for the long, slender arm tapering into a soft white hand.

Lace edging on a bell-shaped sleeve is another revival. Also ruching. On a black broadcloth sleeve, tiny ruffles of almond-green taffeta is an obvious French adornment.

PARIS is doing much with contrasting colors for afternoon gowns. On a tan-tan brown flat crepe dress, a touch of turquoise blue on a banging full panel at the side is the only important decoration. French designers are making such materials in simple styles to bring out the personal charm of the wearer. That her slim lines might be accentuated with the simplicity of the frock is the hidden aim of the creators.

Heavy fabrics, rough and woolly in large checks and plaids still prevail as the dominant notes for sport wear. A suit of such material is topped off with a high, standing fur collar for its smartness. Sometimes fur pockets are added.

Scarfs in Deauville wool and color are carelessly wound around the neck and allowed to hang on the shoulder and down at the side. Green is a favored shade in scarfs and suits contrasted with neutral shades of brown and beige.

MILL HOLIDAY AS SLATER HEIR IS BORN

Webster, Dec. 3.—A new heir to the Slater millions has been born.

The new arrival, a boy, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Horatio N. Slater, Jr., of Webster and New York, in their palatial mansion in New York. He is the fifth in line of the famous Slaters, amassers of the big cotton fortune.

E. L. Moore, treasurer of the Slater mills here, ordered a shutdown of the mills for today, after he received instructions from New York to that effect. The workers are to receive a full day's pay for the holiday. Eight hundred employes of the North Village Mill and 700 in the East Village Mill are affected.

Horatio N. Slater, Jr., is the son of Mrs. Horatio N. Slater of Milton and New York, who recently figured in a court battle in an attempt to force three trustees to surrender her $7,000,000 fortune.

Young Slater was married in December, 1921, to Miss Martha Byers Lyon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Lyon of Pittsburgh. Slater formerly lived at No. 448 Beacon street, Boston. At that time he amazed his friends when he adopted a lion cub for a pet. Young Slater also created sensations as a student at Harvard by the antics of his $7,000 automobile and the pranks of another auto which he bought for $45.

152 DAYS IN JAIL, OR PAY OLD FINE

Dennis J. Sullivan, twenty-seven, No. 10 Waverly street, Brighton, likes a place to stay all Winter, if his wishes and can't help it.

In September, 1922, he was found guilty of operating a car while under the influence of liquor and fined $100. Of this $29 had been paid.

On November 17 of this year he was given a suspended sentence of ten days in the house of correction for drunkenness.

Today he was in Brighton court charged again with being drunk. Today's charge was filed, but Judge Connelly revoked the suspension of the ten days and ordered the balance of the $100 fine worked out or paid. With bad luck in raising money, this will give Sullivan 152 days' free board and lodging.

Society Buds at Doll Sale for Girl Scouts
Betty Alden Reports

By BETTY ALDEN

MISS DOROTHY BATCHELDER, bright-eyed daughter of the George L. Batchelders, is in charge of a doll sale to be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week at the Girl Scout headquarters, No. 725 Boylston street.

Miss Eleanor Seavey

Miss Eleanor Seavey of Hamilton, who has recently become seriously interested in Girl Scout activities, is on Miss Batchelder's committee. She is marshalling together a number of the season's buds, who are to help sell the dolls.

More than seventy-five dolls have been dressed for the sale by scouts and their friends, including Miss Rose L. Dexter of Beacon street.

The last of a series of Monday afternoon lectures in aid of the South End Music School will be held at 4 o'clock this afternoon at Miss Rose Dexter's home, No. 400 Beacon street.

Thomas Whitney Surette is to speak on the "Art of Music," and I presume that just as fashionable and appreciative an audience will be present as attended the other two lectures.

THE "open season" on sales is here, and Dame Society has gone a-hunting with a vengeance for the wherewithal to fill the coffers of her pet charity.

On Wednesday of this week Mrs. "Ollie" Ames, Jr., and Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield are holding a specialty sale at No. 735 Boylston street. The affair is to benefit the Boston Lying-in Hospital.

A feature of the sale will be an array of imported knitted articles. In the afternoon a magician will be on hand to dazzle the youthful customers with a sleight-of-hand exhibition.

AMONG the colonists lingering late on the North Shore are Mr. and Mrs. Harrison K. Caner of Philadelphia, who are to keep "Felsenmeer," their Manchester estate, open until the middle of the month.

Early in the New Year the Caners will make their way across the continent to join the Winter colony at Santa Barbara, where they spent last Winter.

OTHERS remaining late on the Shore are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hopkinson of Manchester Cove and Cambridge. A part of each week finds Mr. Hopkinson in his Boston studio, but the remaining time finds him busy with his canvases at the Shore house.

ORDER EXPRESS COMPANIES TO LOWER RATES

Washington, Dec. 3.—New bases for the application of interstate express rates were laid down today by the Interstate Commerce Commission in a decision which refused the American Railway Express Company the right to make general increases which it asked.

Express companies were ordered to establish new schedules on or before February 21 next incorporating the changes.

Present interstate express rates applied to food articles of nearly all kinds, the commission held, are too high and should be reduced by amounts ranging from 10 to 11 per cent. The companies were required to make the reductions by installing charges which will equal those in effect on October 15, 1920, when increases to the present levels were made.

The commission pointed out that rates are now built on the basis of five zones, one for the northeastern section of the country, one for the southeast, one for Mississippi-Missouri territory, one for the Rocky Mountain area and one for the Pacific coast.

The differences in the factors of rates between each zone, the commission decided, result in too great a discrepancy. Accordingly, a three-zone system was ordered into effect, one zone to take in generally the northeastern section of the United States, the second the southeast and the third all of the territory west of the Mississippi River.

In the reconstructions to be made on the basis of the zones, the commission held that the express carriers might include a haulage factor charge of twenty-five cents per hundred pounds for the first fifty miles in the Northeastern section; twenty-seven and five tenths cents in the Southeastern or second zone; and thirty cents in the third zone.

The general arrangement now followed of blocking out the country in fifty mile squares for the purpose of fixing express charges was said to be satisfactory with the amended zone arrangement and the express companies were ordered to work out rate schedules for later submission to the commission.

MARION DAVIES' NEW PLAY IS "YOLANDA"

"YOLANDA" WILL be retained as the title for the new Marion Davies photo-play from the novel of the same name by Charles Major. The title "Mary of Burgundy" was considered. "Little Old New York," by the way, Miss Davies' last picture, was viewed by 192,424 persons in its first week at New York's Capitol Theatre. Box office receipts were $62,865.19.

MAXIMUM PENALTY FOR DRUNKEN DRIVER

Cleveland, Dec. 3.—Fred M. Weston, real estate operator, charged with striking and dragging Miss Eleanor Carlson for five blocks on the bumper of his automobile No. vember 5, pleaded guilty today to assault and battery. He was fined $200 and given six months, the maximum penalty. "The maximum penalty is inadequate in a case of this sort," said Judge Cull in passing sentence. "Undoubtedly you have suffered already from the notoriety and the knowledge that you were intoxicated at the time of the accident."

Weston, who fled after the accident, was captured ten days later in Manchester, N. H.

Grocery Clerk Ends Life

Vineyard Haven, Dec. 2.—Eugene Amaro, a grocery clerk, was found shot through the head in his bed here today. A revolver was in the right hand. Police said he had committed suicide. He leaves a widow and four children.

CHANGE COURSE OF LINERS; SAVE LIFE OF CHILD

New York, Dec. 2.—Eight-year-old Eleanore Fairchild, for whose sake two big steamships changed course and drew together in mid-ocean on Thanksgiving Day, was carried from the liner Minnewaska today and rushed to a hospital for an operation which it was hoped would save her life.

Eleanor is the daughter of Professor H. P. Fairchild of New York University. Returning from Europe with her parents, she became dangerously ill last Thursday morning. The sea was too rough for the Minnewaska's surgeon to undertake an operation single handed. Besides, the surgeon himself was ill.

A call for help was wirelessed to the Baltic, followed by a second call worded "Hurry. Urgent." Shortly, the funnels of the Baltic hove across the horizon, and soon she was standing by to lower her surgeon over the side and speed him to the Minnewaska. Eleanore's life was saved, at least temporarily, without an operation.

A wireless message preceded the Minnewaska to port, and an ambulance was waiting for the little girl when the ship docked today.

Suicide Was Ex-Convict

New York, Dec. 3.—The body of a man who, last Friday, leaped from the twenty-second floor of a Rector street office building, today was identified by his finger prints as Irving Ellender of Brooklyn, who, the police said, was an ex-burglar. A former inmate of Sing Sing, his body remained today at the morgue, unclaimed.

MRS. ANGELO FOSTER WILL PRESS HER SUIT

New York, Dec. 3.—Mrs. Angelo Scarpa Foster, estranged wife of the young Italian singer, announced today that she will press her suit for alienation of her husband's affections against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Nona McAdoo Foster, the foster-mother of Angelo.

Mrs. Angelo Foster

Young Mrs. Foster will put on letters in evidence to show that she and her temperamental Latin husband, who an older Mrs. Foster had adopted, were on affectionate terms before and after the marriage. The young Mrs. Foster was last week awarded a decree of separation with alimony. Mrs. Nona McAdoo Foster and the young husband have charged that she left the domestic scene of her own accord.

COAL PROFITEERS GET A HEARING

Washington, Dec. 3.—Produce and wholesalers of anthracite who have been charged by the Federal Trade Commission with conspiring in violation of the trade laws to split up premiums in the sale of the commodity, were given an opportunity to be heard today. Most of the transactions cited by the committee took place in 1922 and early in 1923, after the prolonged strike in 1922 which occasioned a coal shortage. Some of the "independent" producers, the citation said, evaded the fixed price levels by requiring wholesalers to split the profit obtained by sale of the coal at higher prices.

BRITISH WOMEN WILL DECIDE ELECTION

London, Dec. 3 (A.P.).—No election expert is willing today to forecast how Thursday's poll will turn out.

The Conservatives, says the Daily Mail, estimate the new House of Commons will consist of 322 Conservatives, 157 Liberals, 120 Laborites and six Independents. The Liberals' estimate is 248 Conservatives, 240 Liberals, 120 Laborites and seven Independents, while the Labor prediction is 310 Conservatives, 160 Laborites, 139 Liberals and six Independents.

Two factors account for this uncertainty, doubt as to how the 243 three-cornered contests will result, and the impossibility of gauging how the women will vote.

The total electorate is 18,337,000, in which there are about 7,890,000 women.

How the thirty-four women candidates are likely to fare is a favorite topic of speculation. According to one writer, Lady Astor is the only one whose return is regarded as in any way certain. This expert also thinks Mrs. Wintringham, the first woman to follow Lady Astor into the House of Commons, is in a fair way to return.

Beware the Christmas Goose

We do not mean the well browned, cheerful looking goose which usurps the position of the proud turkey in many homes on Christmas Day. May his tribe increase.

No, we speak of the other Christmas goose. Pale and wan, she gazed with weary eyes upon far too many Christmas parties last year. She is the woman who put off her shopping until it was one mad scramble, full of duty and empty of Christmas cheer and love.

She is the Christmas goose. Beware lest you be like her. Come in now and choose your gifts. You will have ample opportunity to find just the ones you wish and to enjoy their charm as you do them up with leisurely, affectionate care. You will greet Christmas merrily and with a keen appetite for your own share of the good things on tree and table.

Many articles on our different floors will take happiness to those to whom you send them. A John Brumfit pipe for Cousin Herbert, playing cards for Aunt Mollie, a bracelet for Julia, note paper for Gertrude's voluminous correspondence, an English stick for Brother Bill, some antique glass for Uncle Joseph's collection—we could mention gifts for your entire list. But, better still, bring your list with you and let us show them to you.

HARVARD MAN LEADS SOCIETY THAT MAKES BOYS SOCIALISTS

By WALTER B. FORD.

The Yipsels of today will be the Socialists of tomorrow.

Banded together under the red flag of socialism and singing the "Internationale," adolescent radicals are forming an ever growing nucleus for the Socialist party. They number millions in the world-wide movement.

They are officially the Young People's Socialist League. Their American national headquarters is at No. 64 Pemberton square. Their moving spirit in America is Albert Weisbord, third year Harvard law student, a human dynamo and national Socialist figure at the age of twenty-three.

A. Weisbord

Originally organized for this country in New York, when young Weisbord came here in 1921 to enter Harvard, after taking his A. B. degree at the College of the City of New York, he moved the national officer to Boston and work of organization began through several States in New England.

NOT COMMUNISTS.

The Yipsels are radicals, but not radicals of violence, according to Weisbord.

"We are not Communists. We do not believe in violence, but to say we are not radicals would be an insult to every member of the League," he said to an American reporter.

Mr. Weisbord is studying law at Harvard not to be lawyer as the general term applies but to devote his legal training to the Socialist cause.

It is the irony of circumstance that young Weisbord's father, Jacob Weisbord, a New York clothing manufacturer, is not a Socialist and is most bitterly opposed to his son's course and to all that it stands for.

He denied reports in New York papers that in New York are 4,000 of the embryonic Socialist voters. The World War nearly wrecked the newly-formed organization and it had attained fully 6,000 members in this country in 1919 when the right and left wings of the Socialists split the body internationally.

IS NEW TO BOSTON.

Since then is has taken on new life, with the young Harvard student as its head and now has fully 1,000 paid-up members with fully one-third more not fully paid up. Beyond these numbers, its indirect influence through those who attend the league meetings without being paying members, is widespread.

Organization in Boston only began this past Fall. At present there are a score of active members of the Boston league, it being in its infancy as yet in this city.

The most active member in Boston aside from Mr. Weisbord is Miss Helena Turitz, who is in charge of the Pemberton square headquarters. In Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire are now 350 active members while work is shortly to be extended to Connecticut and Rhode Island. New England district headquarters is at Fitchburg, in charge of Secretary Toivo Tikkala.

Membership in the league is usually restricted to boys and girls up to eighteen years. Junior leagues admit those from fourteen to sixteen and up to eighteen in circles where the age limit is placed at eighteen.

NEARLY LYNCHED.

Members as young as ten years are reported in the Junior League of New York, but Mr. Weisbord denies this are as useful. A circle must have seven members to start and all the circles in a city form a league. The league rule the junior league.

Mr. Weisbord has traveled extensively organizing the league and now has requests to go to points all the way to the coast.

Organization work in Kentucky nearly terminated fatally for him last year, when a misunderstanding mob threatened to end his career.

"For a time I thought my fourteen and a half neck was going to be adjusted to fit a thirteen-inch noose," he said, smiling wryly at the recollection.

"We are supported by many trades unions which donate money for our cause. We may have a Labor Party here as in England. My pet ambition is the establishment of Labor colleges as in some parts of Britain."

WOULD REFORM SCHOOLS.

Mr. Weisbord explains that the organization of the League was primarily for two things—education and politics.

"Official education is now arbitrary," he said. "We believe in giving freedom of individual thought. We would choose our teachers. We want to learn less of great men and great wars and more of social interpretation of history—namely economics.

"The League is a training school for young workers to give them the proper foundation to become Socialist party workers. It is really a recruiting body for the party of tomorrow."

WILLING TO DIE.

Yipsels are taught to stand together, work together and die together for their cause if necessary. Membership dues are 25 cents per month.

Their educational activities savor largely of the open forum in social science, economics and all kindred subjects. Athletics are mixed in the proper proportions for health. Individual expression is a feature of all these educational systems.

Weisbord, in spite of his youth, is high in the councils of the League internationally as well as in America.

BROKE FARRAR CONTRACT BECAUSE OF PROTESTS

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 3.—The steps leading up to the cancellation of the contract made for the use of the Wesley Memorial Methodist Church auditorium for a concert by Geraldine Farrar, grand opera star, were outlined in a sermon by Dr. B. F. Fraser, pastor of the church.

Protests during the recent North Georgia Methodist conference led to the cancellation of the contract by the Rev. W. H. LaPrade, presiding elder of the church, Dr. Fraser said.

He said he did not endorse the conduct of Miss Farrar during the grand opera season three years ago and would never have authorized the contract had he been in possession of the facts.

POINCARE TRIES NEW PLAN TO DRAW HUGHES

Paris, Dec. 3 (AP).—Premier Poincare, head of the reparation commission, and M. de Lacroix, principal Belgian member of that body, were in conference today endeavoring to prepare a satisfactory formula for examination of the German situation.

The effort is to find a wording to avoid infringing the French Premier's declaration that France could not engage in an inquiry in which Germany's liabilities as previously fixed at 132,000,000,000 gold marks could be questioned, and yet would satisfy Secretary of State Hughes that the proposed investigation by experts would have ample range.

The desire of the French and Belgian governments, it is explained, is to place the negotiations with Washington as nearly as possible in the position they were in before the declination of the American government a fortnight ago to accept the French invitation upon the inquiry. It is hoped that by carefully omitting "capacity to pay" or similar phrases Premier Poincare will not be put in the position of appearing to abandon his declaration and that Secretary Hughes still will be given adequate assurance that the projected probing into German finances will indirectly bring out fully all the facts pertinent to Germany's paying capacity. The British and Italian governments are still strongly desirous of reaching this result.

Overcoat-History In The Making

The People of Boston, in Pronouncing for Fairer Clothing Prices, Throw in a Demonstration for Emphasis

Demonstrations Are Not Staged--Cannot Be Staged--Demonstrations Are the Spontaneous Urge of Common Cause

Overcoat History Is Making at Sullivan's This Week

OVERCOATS IN All the Magicry of Design, All the Mystery of Weave, All the Majesty of Quality, All the Ministry of Service $13.90

Now that the first great shock of battle for recognition has placed Sullivan's indisputably among the permanent factors of Boston's clothing life, it may not be amiss to utter

The Bald Facts of Unadorned Truth:

The overcoats you bought Saturday in Sullivan's (and the overcoats Sullivan's offers for today) were not made especially for sale purposes or for any individual concern.

But gathered and garnered and plucked with sedulous care, these overcoats typify America's composite and competitive overcoat industry and are inclusively the products of all the makers who form and comprise the basic underlying source of supply of all big clothing houses.

THANKS AND CONGRATULATIONS

Measurably successful in the attempt to provide overcoats at prices which might meet with public approval, SULLIVAN'S announced its opening for Saturday last, and expected seasonal and measurable response. But for such immeasurable reception foresight could not hope, nor hindsight provide. A waiting public made SULLIVAN'S and 40 Summer Street the theatre of incontrovertible expression —"The people want fairer clothing prices."

SULLIVAN'S would be lacking the elementals of courtesy if this occasion were not taken to thank all for their splendid and substantial attestations of good will, as well as to congratulate a people which can so clearly evince its pleasures in economic directions.

Let us remember that only the enduring is endearing. Neither your desires for fair prices nor the capacity of SULLIVAN'S to meet those desires is a flash in the pan.

On with the Low-Priced Demonstration.

BIG DANCE TONIGHT FOR CHRISTMAS BASKET FUND

SHOW AT WILBUR TO AID

Ten Per Cent. of "Lady of Ermine" First Night Goes to Needy Kiddies

Hundreds of impoverished men, women and children in Greater Boston will receive a substantial meal on Christmas Day as a result of two big affairs scheduled for tonight in aid of the American's Helping Hand Christmas Basket Fund.

These benefit performances are the opening performance of "The Lady in Ermine" at the Wilbur Theatre and a cabaret and dancing party in Crescent Gardens Ballroom, Revere, under the personal direction of Miss Edna May Dowd of Chelsea.

10 PER CENT. TO FUND.

Through courtesy of the Messrs. Shubert, 10 per cent. of the gross proceeds of tonight's performance of "The Lady in Ermine" will be contributed to the American's Fund as well as 5 per cent. of tomorrow and Wednesday night's performances of the same production.

The entire net proceeds of Miss Dowd's cabaret and dancing party will also be turned over to the treasurer of the Basket Fund.

TUNEFUL MUSIC.

"The Lady in Ermine" is a romantic operetta with unusually interesting plot and highly tuneful music. The Christmas Fund Director recommends "The Lady in Ermine" to persons who desire to attend a real high class musical show. Wherever the operetta has been shown, crowded houses have greeted it.

"The Lady in Ermine" is filled from beginning to end with melodious songs, there being no fewer than twenty-two lilting numbers in the production. There is plenty of comedy of the richest and cleanest type.

The cast contains ninety persons. Among the leading members are Walter Woolf, Zelia Russell, Harry K. Morton, Gladys Walton, Shirley Sherman, Timothy Daley, Isabella Hedrgues, Nancy Gibbs, Delmar Poppin, Rollin Grimes and Clarence Harvey.

Many leading Bostonians have planned to attend tonight's performance as all reports indicate that it will be one of the best shows of its type to visit this city this season.

HEAVY SALE OF TICKETS

Miss Dowd, who conducts Chelsea's leading dancing school, reports a heavy sale of tickets for tonight's entertainment and dance at the Crescent Gardens Ballroom. Her many pupils will take part in three spectacular group numbers. In addition there will be many solos.

Lovers of exhibition ballroom dancing who attend tonight's party will have a treat as Miss Dowd has arranged special exhibitions by Jack Libby and "Babe" Cummings and Russel Howard and Kathryn Tobin, four of the leading ballroom artists in the country.

The cabaret program will begin at 8 o'clock and continue until 9:30 after which there will be general dancing to the regular Crescent Gardens Ballroom orchestra of fifteen musicians. This orchestra is in a class by itself. What its members do not know about syncopation is not worth knowing.

PUBLIC INVITED.

Miss Dowd invites the public to attend tonight's party, and as the palatial Crescent Gardens Ballroom will accommodate 3,000 dancers at one time, there will be plenty of room for all. Tickets may be obtained at the door, the price being 65 cents for gentlemen and 40 cents for women and children, with checking free.

Some of the leading pupils of Miss Dowd who will take part are: Ruth Neelon, Jeanette Siskind, Harriet Shalik, Dorothy Hanlon, Frances Hagan, James Mulligan, Mary Norton, Thelma Harney, Mary Mulligan, Rose Kupersmack, Dorothy Moran, Mary M. Riordan, Helen Cronin, Harry Alter, Anna Kinnally, Anna Sullivan, Helen Amazeen, Doris Christopher, Ruth Hamburg, Shirley Rosenfield, Dora Gaskell, Lillian Bloom and Helene Zummerman.

TWO MORE PARTIES.

Two more parties in behalf of the fund are scheduled for this week. The first is an entertainment and dance on Wednesday evening in the Lyman Studio, No. 337 Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, under the direction of Louise J. Lyons and Florence McGuire-Herrick dancing studios.

The other party will be an entertainment in East Boston High School Hall, Friday evening, by the Kathryn Sloane Schools of Dancing.

In addition, there will be an excellent radio concert from the Shepard Stores (WNAC), next Thursday night under the personal direction of Miss Helen M. Roche of South Boston. Miss Roche hopes that the radio fans who enjoy the program which she has arranged will help the Basket Fund by sending in contributions.

PUPILS ASSISTING.

Miss Lyons conducts a leading Roxbury dancing school and Mrs. Herrick is one of Cambridge's finest dancing teachers. Miss Sloane is one of the leading dancing teachers of East Boston, having two studios in that district. The many pupils of these three teachers are helping to make their parties a success.

Another event during the week to help the Basket Fund will be a whist party in Dover Town Hall, Friday night, under the direction of Mrs. Alice Helndi, a leading resident of that town. She is also aiding the Basket Fund in other ways.

With more returns to be made, $135.55 has been turned into the Fund as a result of the entertainment and dance conducted in "The Music Box," Huntington avenue, by Anna Griffin Killion and the American Girls' Club.

WNAC GETS RID OF "SAWMILL HUMMING"

The sawmill hum that has become familiar to radio fans whenever they tune in on the Shepard Stores WNAC will be no more after this week.

The motor generators which for nearly a year and a half have supplied the power for the station are to be junked and replaced by powerful storage batteries. With the motor generators will go the sawmill hum, and WNAC will be the first broadcasting station on the Atlantic seaboard to be run on storage batteries.

Ever since the station was installed the generators have produced a hum that at times is disagreeable. Various attempts have been made by those in charge to remedy it, but to no avail. Now the Shepard Stores are following in the footsteps of WTAM at Cleveland and will have a real "silent" station.

RADCLIFFE GIRLS RAP CHURCH WARS

They think there is too much of the controversial spirit in religious circles, explained Rev. Newton C. Fetter, student pastor of the First Baptist Church, in his address today before Baptist ministers in Chapman Hall.

"I believe young people today are more moral than ever before. They are more moral in their courtships than David, of Bible fame," he maintained.

"Recently I examined some documents of the young people of 1775 and there, in the town of Groton, in this State, in that year, sixty-six young people had to make an open public confession of their sins before they were accepted into the churches."

ALL FRENCH LINERS' RATES ON $1 BASIS

Paris, Dec. 3.—The American dollar has been established as the exclusive standard for fixing steamship rates from French ports to the United States by all the transatlantic lines in Paris, including the government-subsidized French line, the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, which refuses to quote passenger tariffs in francs even to French Nationals. The British companies with offices here are also quoting rates in dollars, to the exclusion of sterling. The arrangement came into effect December 1.

FOR LIMIT ON BABIES, WOMEN TELL PASTOR

All were in favor of birth control.

Majority agreed a family should be limited to four children.

Majority said their husbands still loved them, one remarking that she was positive because he "acted like a fool at times."

Majority built the fire for breakfast.

Nobody had met a more desirable man since married, one remarking that she had "never looked at a man since marriage."

The questionnaire was sent out by the church pastor, Rev. Louis W. West. He read answers to a congregation which jammed the church on Sunday.

Not one of the women expressed regret she had married, and all said their experience was that there was more contentment in marriage than in the courtship period. None of the women had any reason for jealousy, and all stated they had no trouble securing money from their husbands.

Few women admitted they quarreled with their husbands, all conceded they argued with them and won.

Rev. Mr. West's experiment of opening the church vestry Sunday afternoon during the winter to couples who do not care to go walking or riding, proved successful. There were fifteen couples on hand. The women brought cake and coffee. An orchestra of four pieces furnished music.

St. Mary's Street Elms in Brookline Must Be Felled

The seven American elm trees outside the curb line on St. Mary's street, Brookline, near Beacon street, are to come down. This ends an effort on the part of residents to save them by having the curb line extended.

The trees are from fifty to seventy-five years old.

The committee on tree planting had complained to the board of selectmen of Brookline that the trees were dangerous to traffic. Residents asked the selectmen to extend the curb line.

'Other Man' in Home as Guard, Mrs. Brigham Says

MRS. CHESTER BRIGHAM

Organist's wife denies impropriety with man found with her in Houghs Neck cottage by detectives, saying he was there as protection during the gale on the night of the raid.

There's a curly haired boy with the bluest of eyes who wants to see sunlight again in his home instead of the dark, dark shadows.

The little melodeon where his father sat and drew songs from the angels is silent.

The song of songs that sent Hazel Brown to the altar with Chester Brigham has echoed discordantly and died. They are at the threshold of divorce and those are the dark shadows that Bobby Brigham sees.

TRAPPED IN COTTAGE.

Brigham has not only sued for divorce but followed that with an alienation of affections suit against another man whom he named as the cause of his marital grief.

That man is Wallace F. Smith, son of a wealthy Roxbury business man.

One night last summer when the wind swept off Quincy Bay and shivered the summer cottages at Houghs Neck, Brigham with detective stole up on a darkened bungalow. They repped at the portals. A light shone, then the door opened.

In divorce court in East Cambridge this was testified to.

DENIES IMPROPRIETY.

Today at the home of her sister at 15 Cliff road, Milton, Mrs. Brigham admitted it, but added:

"Wallace stayed overnight to protect Bobby and me. It is a horrible insinuation that he was there for anything else. He called upon me that evening. We had been good friends for months. It blew up cold and blustery. The cottage rocked. I was afraid.

"He offered to remain. I was thankful to have him; it was horribly lonesome and the wind howled so. He slept with Bobby, was asleep in fact when my husband came with the detectives.

"Well, if it has helped him any casting such insinuations, well and good. I suffered enough with him. God knows. No girl ever had such an awakening as did I.

FORCED TO LEAVE HIM.

"I met Chester when he was organist in a movie house in Boston. I was studying music at the time and interested. He fascinated me. He was a wonderful player. He went into vaudeville and on the road.

"From Vancouver he telegraphed me begging that I cross the country and marry him. It was beautifully romantic and held an irresistible glamour. I went. We were married and for one year life was a dream.

"We traveled continuously. It was one long honeymoon. Then we returned to Boston and settled down. Bobby came, then trouble. Bobby is three. Following his birth, life with my husband was torture. He was insanely jealous of me, also possessed a musician's temperament which is cross enough for any wife to bear. I finally left him.

HOPES TO BE HAPPY.

Then Wallace and I became good friends. But until the night he stayed to protect Bobby and me in the cottage no circumstances ever arose where my husband would dare point a finger of suspicion towards me.

Now, however—well, what do I care, anyway. Let him have his divorce and maybe I'll find happiness. Life can't be sour eternally."

The divorce verdict has not been rendered.

Judge Leggat took the case under advisement.

Following the verdict, Brigham's suit for $10,000 against Smith will be heard.

CHESTER BRIGHAM AND SON

Brigham's divorce case is now under advisement and he is ready to sue Wallace F. Smith of Roxbury for alienation of affections after a verdict is rendered.

PRICES OF MEAT SLASHED IN BOSTON

'Sheik' Who Woos By Embroidery Fined

MEAT DROPS TO PRE-WAR PRICES

People Becoming Vegetarians, Packers Say, as Buyers Are Few

Take it from the big meat packers, the American people are becoming vegetarians. Meat prices have dropped to the 1913 level in Boston, with no demand for it at any price.

Pork loins for chops and roasts sold in Boston today for 20 to 30 cents a pound at retail, with few buyers.

Meats of all kinds, except the fancy cuts of beef, which are always in demand, are steadily declining in price.

Poultry prices are sensationally low.

Thousands of carcasses are stowed away in cold storage warehouses in order to prevent the bottom from falling out of the market entirely.

A Boston representative of one of the big Western meat packers said today that pork loins are selling at wholesale for 13½ cents a pound. This price is probably "shaded" for big buyers.

Fancy loins, the finest obtainable from small pigs, sell in the wholesale way for 15½ cents a pound, still, the public does not buy.

The big hog raisers in the Central and Middle Western States are dumping their hogs on the markets at ruinous prices, according to dispatches from the packing centres.

The price of corn is so high and the price of hogs so low that the stock raisers will not feed corn to their hogs.

In order to avoid freight rates hogs are being driven to the slaughtering centres in automobile trucks, and millions of hogs have been sold.

The heavy receipts of hogs at the packing house stockyards has cut the price in half since September 1, and has cut it 20 per cent. since November 1.

Jibes Lady Astor for Not Wearing Best Clothes

London, Dec. 3 (A.P.).—Lady Terrington, Liberal candidate for the House of Commons in Wycombe, has told the public how she intends to dress if she goes to Parliament.

"I intend to wear my best clothes," she asserted. "I will put on my fur coat and my pearls. I don't believe in a woman politician wearing a dull little frock with a Quakerish collar. That sort of thing is all humbug. It is sheer hypocrisy to pretend you have no nice things when you display them in your own home and make social appearances."

This was apparently a jibe at Lady Astor, who set the fashion for a demure and unobtrusive style of dress in the Commons.

PASTOR TAKES PINT OF RUM INTO PULPIT

Marlboro, Dec. 2.—Rev. Paul Harris Drake of the First Universalist Church here instilled a kick in his sermon on "Hell, Home Brew and Hallelujah," when he displayed before the astonished gaze of his parishioners a pint bottle of liquor which he drew from his hip pocket and placed on the pulpit.

In his address, Rev. Mr. Drake scored Mayor Simoneau and the police for alleged lack of liquor enforcement in the city and hinted that he had heard reports that the police were being paid by bootleggers to close their eyes to the traffic.

The minister's sermon has a bearing on the city election which is to take place here Tuesday. Mayor Simoneau is a candidate for re-election, opposing Ex-Representative James M. Hurley for the office.

In displaying the bottle of liquor to his congregation, Rev. Mr. Drake explained that it had been bought in this city by a citizen who told him that liquor was easily obtainable.

"I don't like to discuss the liquor question," Rev. Mr. Drake said, "but there are so many young people going to Hell because of the liquor sold in this city and every bootlegger is shouting "Hallelujah" because the city is wide open, that what else can a self-respecting minister talk about?

"The taxpayers are expending $30,000 a year for police protection. Yet some people openly intimate that the police officials are getting money under false pretenses by failing to enforce the law. Many defendants have been before courts in many other cities and towns who have told the judges that they bought liquor in Marlboro.

"Mayor Simoneau knows conditions in Marlboro are not what they should be—far from what they are in other cities in the State. I am ashamed of the loose reputation Marlboro has in this State. And it is because the Mayor has not kept faith with the ministers in making good his promise to clean up the city.

MARTIN LOMASNEY IS 64 YEARS OLD TODAY

Martin M. Lomasney, who has been everything or nearly everything from bootblack and newsboy to State Senator is sixty-four years old today.

From the Hendricks Club, where he rules the West End he ventures a few pointed opinions on the men and affairs of today. A few of his opinions:

"Expediency and principle govern all human conduct."

Irish Drown Pigs

Dublin, Dec. 3.—Farmers in County Donegal are drowning their young pigs because the prices they bring are so low that it is unprofitable to raise them. It is not an unusual sight to see a farmer open his cart and let a litter of young pigs out for anyone to take.

HEARTS ON PILLOW HE WORKED

Roxbury Man's Wife Now Suing Wealthy Widow on Alienation Charge

Embroidery Sheik.

He romeos over needles.

WOOED WITH PILLOW.

He wooed Edna Galbraith, wealthy widow, with one of his embroidered sofa pillows. Hearts of silken floss were on it. Also a cherubim. It is a head rest for a queen. The Sheik's tireless fingers built it so. So dainty did the Embroidery Sheik finish this masterpiece there was but one stuffing good enough for it—fuzz off peaches.

But that sofa pillow will bring the Sheik into court.

WIFE SUES FOR $50,000

His wife, Catherine, has sued Mrs. Galbraith for $50,000, charging alienation of the embroiderer's affections. The Sheik was arrested not long ago in Reno, Nev., charged with desertion. He was trying to get rid of his wife via the divorce route. It was a far cry from his home at No. 68 Thetford avenue, Dorchester. He came back and was arraigned here for non support.

Later Mrs. Lang entered suit. Mrs. Galbraith new tells the world that—

ALMOST FAINTED.

"Jerry told me he was single. I felt sorry for him, he seemed so forlorn and lonely. I had him join my family circle. One night he brought his embroidery down to the living room. I almost fainted. Thought he had lost his mind. But he went along, finished it and presented it to me. This note with it:

"You may not be so fond of my selection of colors and pattern, with my ideas added. If this is so allow me to apologize. I trust that you shall like it. It is all my handiwork plus my idea of finishing. The entire is hand sewed and embroidered as you probably can discern.

"JERRY."

"He is an embroidery Romeo."

BOTH IN COURT.

In Roxbury Court, when charged with misconduct with Mrs. Galbraith, who lives at No. 715 Dudley street, Roxbury, Lang calmly pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Galbraith was found guilty and sentenced to three months in jail. She appealed.

When the $50,000 suit reaches court Mrs. Lang will tell how she saved to let the Embroidery Sheik get an education. He wanted to enter Harvard and study law. They have three children.

ROBB, SWOPE, WILL KNOW FATE BEFORE XMAS

William M. Robb, Back Bay physician, and Dr. Daiva H. Swope of Brockton, awaiting trial in East Cambridge in connection with the death of Mrs. Alice M. Wolchendorf, principal in the famous Merrimac River suitcase mystery, will know their fate before Christmas.

Wm. M. Robb.

Dr. D. H. Swope

Although their trial is not scheduled for this month, District Attorney Arthur K. Reading said today:

"The case will positively be disposed of this month."

The district attorney refused to enlarge on this significant announcement or to say that a date had been set for trial. His statement follows important conferences which have been going on with the physicians' counsel, Attorneys John H. Feeney for Dr. Robb and Fred Katzman, former district attorney of Norfolk County for Dr. Swope. Another conference is scheduled between the district attorney and lawyers for Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

Dr. Robb, once turned out of New Hampshire for malpractice, is charged with first degree murder and Dr. Swope with being an accessory. The body of Mrs. Wolchendorf, East Bridgewater, mother of four, was found dismembered and packed into suit cases in the Merrimac River some months ago.

Dr. Robb is reported to have lost weight due to fretting in jail. Dr. Swope appears in fine spirits. Both are visited daily by their wives.

WEEK-END AUTO DEATH TOLL GROWS

Many Fatalities Are Reported From All Over New England in Highway Crashes

While cranking up a Ford truck on his machine at a gas station on Dorchester avenue, Alfred Guerrino, 23, of No. 122 Wood avenue, Braintree, was struck in the head and rendered unconscious when the tire rim flew off.

PORTLAND KLAN BOASTS IT WILL WIN ELECTION

Prtland, Me., Dec. 3.—The first election here since the adoption of the commission-manager form of municipal government was held today. A referendum also was held on the use of daylight saving time again next year.

There were seventeen candidates for the council which will manage the city's affairs in place of the Mayor, aldermen and Councilmen chosen under the former system, and which will name the city manager. Thirteen candidates were named for the school committee of seven. Two women filed nomination papers for the council and four for the school committee.

Officials of the Ku Klux Klan had announced that "Klan candidates—though not necessarily Klan members"—would be elected. The ticket which that organization's members were understood to support contained the names of four candidates for the council and six for the school board.

RADIO AMERICAN

RADIO SQUEALS DUE TO BAD TUNING

Anyone who listened in Saturday night in the effort to hear Shipyard broadcasting will vigorously agree that reckless tuning and code interference go hand in hand to make us unsociable.

And during the two-way tests the reckless tuner had the wild code operator lashed to the mast, gasping for breath.

If you wished to bring your radio frequency set to the wave of the British station supposed to be sending, it was easy. You didn't have to look at a dial. It was only necessary to tune to the wildest squeals. You were then right on the dot.

The regenerative set, Reinarts tuners, one-circuit howlers can be operated not to be nuisances, but the fact is, they are not so operated. And a couple more nights like Saturday and laws will be passed to legislate them out of existence as vicious nuisances.

SQUEALS UNJUSTIFIED.

When you sign the petition to the President to jump on code interference like a city horse with caulks on, make sure you are running that receiver at home without the squeal.

Code is bad enough—ask any broadcast enthusiast. But there is some justification for the code, little as it is. Absolutely no justification exists for the receiver that radiates a wave that disturbs the whole neighborhood.

Anyway, sign the petition. President Coolidge is interested. He promises to prod Congress into regulating radio interference out of existence. Back him up by signing the petition, and by getting others to sign.

Here are a couple of letters that came when they backed the last drayload of petitioners' mail up to the door.

CODE LIKE BARRAGE

"Radio Editor:—

"Inclosed please find signed petition to the President. I want to commend you for working to help the broadcast listener. The other evening I was enjoying a fine concert from CHYC at Montreal. The Royal Highlands Band of Canada were fine. In fact, it would have been all good if the radio telegraphy world had not laid down a barrage of code.

"R. H. WEEKS.

"Derry, N. H."

"Radio Editor:

"I am sending you nine more names which makes eighteen altogether. I am sorry it is not eighteen thousand. I think the disturbance Saturday night was worse than ever. I have an R. C. set and it was practically impossible to get anything but WEZ. I will try and get more to sign the petition and mail them to you.

"GEO. L. AUBREY.

"Springfield, Mass."

SPOILED BEDTIME STORY.

"Radio Editor:

"I enclose the petition in your paper. I have just enjoyed a beautiful concert last night from 7 to 9. It consisted of code telegraph calls and messages, with an occasional note of music from WCAE. WGY. or WOR, whichever station I happened to be tuned on. After 9 o'clock conditions improved somewhat. It was absolutely impossible to get a bedtime story for the children on account of the code.

"C. W. DERBY.

"Alton, N. H."

"Radio Editor:

"Have signed your petition and want to thank you for your worthy move.

"JOSEPH POOLU.

"Laconia, N. H."

Petition to President

To the Honorable Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States:

We, the undersigned radio broadcast listeners, respectfully call your attention to the serious interference to radio reception which is caused by remediable factors. We petition you to take action to have this interference stopped.

Paste additional paper on this petition, sign it, get your friends to sign it and forward to the Radio Editor, Boston American, 80 Summer street, Boston 8, Mass.

Petition Is Signed by Many Thousands

Petitions to President Coolidge to stop radio interference are pouring in to the Boston American office in such numbers that it is impossible to publish the names of all the signers.

Many of the petitioners have written letters to accompany the petitions, and these letters are being published from time to time.

"Radio Editor:

"Please find enclosed petition to the President. I want to commend you for working to help the broadcast listener. The other evening I was enjoying a fine concert from CHYC at Montreal. WJZ to Give Music Week Feature Tonight

New York's Annual Music Week is scheduled for the latter part of April, but it will make its radio debut from station WJZ to the whole country tonight when Miss Isabel Lowden gives to the radio audiences what is likely to prove one of the most unusual musical features of the season.

Miss Lowden, who is the sister of Ex-Governor Lowden of Illinois, will tell of the novel and gigantic contests now being held throughout the City of New York in preparation for Music Week, how a system of selective trials is to be used in determining the score or less best musicians throughout the entire scope of the largest city in the world. New York was the first to start a music week, and it is now practically a nation-wide institution; and every city which has established such a week will be intensely interested in New York's new system; while those who are merely interested in the growth of musical appreciation and endeavor throughout the country will find her talk equally encouraging.

WJZ will from time to time give to the country later details of the progress of the Music Week Competition, and will broadcast the semi-finals and finals as they are held. Radio is for the first time actively co-operating in the Music Week endeavor, and the listeners-in should find the programs most worthwhile.

Listeners-In

That deep voiced announcer at WGY, Schenectady, had a fine air announcing a musical program. He broke in on the schedule Thus: "Our next number is especially addressed to a friend in South Boston. Just because its you, Dear' by the WGY Orchestra." And all the single circuiters in my neighborhood squealed to show they "got it." Wonder if Miss South Boston did, too.

* * *

He was announcing a football game. I know him well. "Both teams are fighting fiercely," he said. "It is a hair-raising game." But please tell me how he knew it was hair-raising. He hasn't had any to raise, not any, for years and years and years.

* * *

It really was late, after midnight, and we had no business to be using the loud speaker in our crowded block. But we were interested in trying to hear those British stations and waited up to dodge the one circuit boys that catch them with the squeal. Suddenly Amrad boomed in like a ton of bricks—"Hello England! Hello! England!" Just then some bird upstairs yelled down the airshaft. "Open your windows, and then they'll hear you! Then we can all go to sleep" The earphones were plugged in pronto, or sooner.

* * *

Radio Editor:—

I feel that you will be interested to know that I was able to pick up the British radio broadcasts.

A few minutes after 10 o'clock station 2LO London was clearly heard, saying that Marconi was to speak, Nov. 27.

Station 2LY at Manchester was heard plainly stating that they were using a 385 meter wave and then came "Hello, hello, hello America" several times, followed by, "Are you hearing us over there." A piano number came through well. This was at 10.43 p. m.

Station 5NO at Newcastle was heard. When signing off the words "good night" were repeated three times at 10.46.

One of above also stated that the American stations had been received there the previous night. I also received 2LO Sunday night through heavy static.

FILES BILL TO CURB FEDERAL JUDGES

Washington, Dec. 3.—Federal judges would be prohibited from determining the guilt or innocence of persons ordered up for contempt committed outside their courtrooms under a bill proposed by Representative Stengle of New York.

He said the measure was designed to prevent recurrence of such sentences as that imposed by Judge Mayer upon Comptroller Craig of New York city.

RECORD OUTPUT OF PLAYING CARDS

Washington, Dec. 3.—Two packs of playing cards for each family in the United States have been put out by the sixty-four concerns engaged in their manufacture in the past twelve months. The total output was slightly more than fifty million packs.

RADIO QUERIES

Radio Editor:

Can I use four WD11 tubes with three Framingham phonstats, 6 ohms each, in the Supernautrodyne? Also can I use two 23 plate condensers and should they be mounted in a ripped position? Is there any way to leave out the 90 volts of B battery?

GEORGE SMALL.

Roxbury.

You can use WD11 tubes and the 6 ohm rheostats may be used, although they will not give much control. The 23 plate condensers will probably work OK if secondary turns are correct. Mount on 45 degree angle; 90 volts B battery must be used, as this is the correct plate voltage for the R. F. amplifier.

Radio Editor:

Is the enclosed hookup correct for two tubes?

JOHN H. FULLICK.

728 Commonwealth avenue.

Yes, if you place the R. F. tube rheostat in the plate side, and change the condenser you now have leading from the detector filament and place it across the output binding posts.

Radio Editor:

In one issue of the American the diagram gave the Super coils as 60 turns, secondary, and the printed instructions gave it as 65. Which is correct?

Gardner. J. J. MORZE.

Either will work, if both transformers are wound the same. If you have not already started the set, we suggest you wait for the new modified hookup, soon to be published.

Radio Editor:

Would like to use 4 hard tube, the U. V. 199 as detector, in the supersonodyne. Will it work all right, and would one more 199 work in the radio frequency amplifier? This is supposed to be better for R. F. than the 201A specified. About condensers would there be any benefit in using a standard 11 plate design different from that specified.

RUSSEL DINGES.

West Barrington, R. I.

The 199 tubes will work in either or both places. The condensers you have should also work.

Radio Editor:

Would it be possible to attach a story made two-stage audio amplifier, which I now have on hand, to a superneutrodyne? If so, what changes are necessary?

HARRY J. O'DONNELL.

Everett.

Yes. We will publish in a few days a diagram showing just how it may best be done. Suggest that you wait for the new series of the different forms of the superheterodyne.

IRRITATED SKIN QUICKLY SOOTHED BY THIS SULPHUR

Says Mentho-Sulphur Overcomes Trouble Almost Overnight.

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist.

The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or disfigurement. Mentho-Sulphur always heals eczema right up.

Obituary

Dr. Frederick Ellis Emerson, 70 years old, died yesterday at his home, 1 Commonwealth avenue, Boston. He was born in Boston, graduated from Harvard College and Harvard Medical School. After graduating, Dr. Underwood established his office in this city and was the physician for several societies. He took an active part in civic affairs. He leaves a brother.

Mothers know a dose of DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN Will keep them fit

'First Aid' For Sick Children

THE experienced mother is not alarmed when a child becomes sick. She knows that most of the ailments of childhood are trifling. If it seems serious she calls a doctor, but whether or not she calls him she gives, first of all, a good laxative medicine. The doctor would advise that anyway. It is his "first aid." Such experienced mothers as Mrs. Everett E. Hunt of Bristol, Okla., who has given children and never any sickness, and Mrs. P. B. Kalkinski of Prosser, Wash., always give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at the first indication of sickness. Such timely doses have saved them much worry.

The Meaning of "Good"

All doctors agree that a thorough cleaning out of the bowels is of first importance for it removes dangerous, intestinal poisons. They will also advise a "good laxative," and by "good" they mean one that is effective and yet harmless. "They know that there are physics that are too severe and harsh to children - calomel, which is mercury and poisons the teeth; phosphate, a mild laxative drug that causes

Tablets, salts, which concentrate the blood and dry up the saliva. They consider Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin safe for all ages as they know it is a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and aromatics. The formula is on the package.

Give Laxative for Colds

Adults should have at least one movement of the bowels every 24 hours, and children two or three. Those who have it regularly seldom have headache, biliousness, drowsiness, lack of appetite. Give a dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at bedtime, and there will be health and good feeling by morning. A 25 cent box lasts a month, and a bottle can be had at any drug store. Colds and constipation come together, so if you notice coming of either stop it at once with Syrup Pepsin.

If You Want to Try It Free Before Buying—Syrup Pepsin, 537 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

QUERIES ABOUT SUPERNEUTRODYNE DELUGE ITS INVENTOR

PATIENCE BY FANS URGED

Set Works If Directions Followed; Wait for Modified Hookup

By M. A. SIMMONS,
Inventor of the Superneutrodyne. Patented and registered at U. S. patent office.

That's the code for "Help."

We're broadcasting that call right now.

Every mail brings in baskets of queries about the Super. And it seems as if every one wanted a personal reply, by special delivery. Honest, some were so eager to get to work on the new set that they wanted replies by wire, collect.

Wish we could. Wish we could, also see every one of the enthusiasts that comes to the office.

But if that task is undertaken, when will it be possible to get out those new diagrams, photographs, lists of parts and all the other information we have been promising you?

That's why we are S O S-ing.

INSTRUCTIONS MISSED.

Please do NOT ask for personal replies by mail, and please do not for a while at least hope for personal instruction.

Every day we will answer in this page the queries that seem to indicate a general trouble.

Most of the letters so far indicate either that the writer has missed the original instructions in whole or in part, or that misprints, or blurs in the drawings caused confusion.

Right here we can answer one big gist of questions: Yes, the Super WILL work with dry cell tubes, always remembering that the volume will be somewhat less than with 201A tubes.

WAIT FOR NEW HOOKUP.

There seems also to be some confusion as to the number of turns on the secondary of the radio-frequency transformers, one of the diagrams calling for sixty turns, and printed matter for sixty-five. Either will work if both transformers are the same.

That confusion was due to the fact that the Super was still in process of refinement. And in this connection let us urge you, if you have not already hooked up your set, to wait for the new diagrams of the perfected Super.

You have buried us under an avalanche of letters. We have been sorting over these in the effort to discover what seemed to be the greatest difficulty with Super builders, and to prepare explanations or make modifications that would clear up the troubles.

This is what you seem to want:

GETTING HER BEDTIME STORY

This is the famous Superneutrodyne. It's so easy to handle that even a little fan like the girl in the picture can make the distant stations talk.

New, clearly printed diagrams. They're coming.

ALL DETAILS COMING.

Names of standard parts that will substitute for those originally specified. They're coming, too.

Hookup to use with factory built two stage audio amplifier. That's on the way.

Names of stores supplying specified parts. Well, you'll have to watch the advertisements in this page to find that information. The same answer applies to ready made radio couplers for the Super. Watch the ads.

In brief we are to publish in a few series the new, perfected Super, hookups, photographs, new building directions, new specifications and all so that it will be possible to start from the beginning and make the set.

You have probably heard someone say the Superneutrodyne won't work. That could come only from a croaker who hadn't built one, or from someone personally interested in selling you something else.

SOME TESTIMONIALS.

This one is from R. J. Nault, No. 112 Browne street, Brookline:

Radio Editor:

Last night was the first time I tried out a superneutrodyne set made at home according to directions published in the Boston American. The result was beyond my expectations.

It was very easy to tune, not a bit critical. No body capacity, no squeal, no howls. Zion City, Ill., came in on the long speaker with good volume, as did KDKA and WSB. Got fourteen stations within two hours. What more could a fan desire?

And here's an enthusiastic letter from F. H. Clark, 22 Market Square, West Lynn, a member of the Thomson Radio Club, of the General Electric Co.:

Radio Editor:

The superneutrodyne is a wonderful set, the best I have had yet. I have tried everything going. But you say it is not possible to use dry cell tubes. Well, here is what I am using, 201A for radio, and WD11 for detector and two 201As for amplifyers, and I could not wish for better. Here is my list the first time I tried it: WNAC, WLW, KDKA, WGI, WGY, WJAR, WTAM, WOR, WJ..., WJAZ, WOC, WCR, all on a loud speaker.

PEABODY AND LYNN PLAY OFF FOR NORTH SHORE HONORS

DECISION ENDS BIG TANGLE

By FRED C. LANE

The tangle in the North Shore League concerning the winner of the championship will be decided by a post-season game between Lynn Classical and Peabody next Saturday at Peabody.

It was decided at a conference be[tween] President Willard Wood [of] the [and] Principal [of] Lynn's [to] play the post season [game].

North Shore League circles have been in the throes of tange never before known. The cause was the ruling of an official in the Marblehead-Classical game. Classical claimed the official's ruling robbed them of a safety and victory. The league refused to recognize the claim and the game is chalked down as a tie.

The heavy rain of November 24 prevented Peabody and Classical from playing. Since then both teams have been claiming the championship.

Now that it has finally been determined to play the game it means one of the biggest crowds of the year next Saturday at Peabody.

It is expected that Haverhill High and Salem High will clash in a post-season game at Haverhill next Saturday. Coach Broderick and the Salem team will not return to Salem until tonight. They played an intersectional game in Cleveland, O., Saturday and met defeat.

St. James High, another Haverhill school, is also expecting to play a post-season game Saturday, but an opponent has not been found

Grit Carried Girl Champ to Golf Glory

Miss Cummings, defeated in four previous attempts to win the woman's title, never gave up. She declared that she would eventually lead the field, and she made good the promise. The champion is twenty-four years of age, and her game is constantly improving. Taking her crown away offers Glenna Collett and the other stars a real job next year.

By TOM THORP.

Pluck, grit and natural ability are recognized as undisputable virtues in the field of sports. Coupling these with the inheritance of a natural fondness for a sport from a parent, appears to be a hand that cannot be denied.

The history of the rise of Edith Cummings, the youthful Chicago miss who worked her way from the novice class to a championship in a very few years, is proof enough that when these attributes are developed along safe and sound lines that they cannot help but win success at the royal and ancient game.

When Edith Cummings captured the national women's golf championship at the Westchester-Biltmore Club this past October the rolling Windy City was treated to a repetition of the pluck and grit of this sweet miss from the Windy City.

Previously the crown had been won by stars from the east and south, the west never having developed a champion strong or experienced enough to gain national honors.

DEFEATED MISS STIRLING IN FINALS FOR TITLE

When Edith Cummings finished with the surprising score of 3 up and 2 to play, the Windy City had victory that it had sought for many years. The fact that it was through a fine display of grit along with brilliant golf that carried the Chicagoan, a member of the Onwentsia Country Club, to victory over such an experienced veteran as Alexa Stirling, was a source of great comfort and admiration for her western brother and sister golfers.

This was her fifth attempt to take the national women's golf title. Last year she was a semi-finalist, losing to Glenna Collett, who went on to win the title. Upon [illegible] she failed to finish in the lead she made a promise that she would not quit championship tournaments until she had acquired the title.

The fact that her father, David Mark Cummings, was a former Chicago district champion, and that her brother, Dexter Cummings, has an intercollegiate golf title to his credit, made that Windy City maid stick it out when it looked for all the world as if she was going to fail.

The present champion is twenty-four years of age. She was born in Chicago. Her father is one of the most popular clubmen in the famous Windy City. It is to the latter that the present titleholder attributes her fondness for the royal and ancient game.

As far back as her recollection can take her she remembers the many lessons her father gave her on the famous links that are scattered along the "Golf Coast" that Windy City fans boast of as the [illegible] of Lake Michigan.

Those who have known the Cummings family for years state that it is seldom a Sunday has passed that the famous father and his children did not leave the Cummings [illegible] links smartly held [illegible]

Six-Day Bicycle Riders to Live High During Grind

New York, Dec. 3 (Universal).—Twenty-four hundred eggs, two hundred chickens, four sides of beef, six lambs and two barrels of beans were in evidence at the Madison Square Garden as the six-day bicycle riders started their grind.

The riders' commissary department also includes two barrels of potatoes, 100 pounds of rice, 350 pounds of sugar, twenty cases of fruit and 100 bunches of celery.

WILLIAMS FIVE TO START MINUS CAPTAIN

Williamstown, Dec. 3.—Jim Robinson of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., captain of the Williams football team, was unable to play during the season just closed because he was forced to undergo an operation for appendicitis on the day of the opening game. Now the basketball team has been hit in a similar way. It also will be without the services of the basketball captain. Allan Blackmer of Chicago, at least for the early games this Fall.

Blackmer is now at his home recuperating from an attack of appendicitis. It is hoped that [illegible] services will be available to the purple quintet after the Christmas holidays.

LANDIS MAKES MYSTERY TRIP TO NEW YORK

By DAVIS WALSH.

New York, Dec. 3.—Having arrived here on Saturday with a stealth so mysterious as to start tongues wagging, Judge Landis has again made a noise like a rubber heel and disappeared from the Hotel Commodore between the setting of one sun and the rising of another.

Judge Landis

In the wake of his departure for parts unknown flourished a crop of rumors, one of which has it that the judge came here to officiate at the preliminary ceremonies attendant upon the alleged official demise of Charles Stoneham as president of the New York Giants.

It is also said that the judge was in town to look into the Hornsby business, although his connection with a possible trade of the Cardinal star to the Giants would seem to be just a bit vague and obscure.

A more plausible answer is that Landis is still trying to run down the source of reported opposition to his leadership of baseball with the idea of approaching the annual meetings at Chicago next week with advance information as to friend and foe.

In view of the fact that William H. McCarthy, deposed head of the Pacific Coast League, was and still is a guest at a nearby hostelry, it was assumed that the judge's visit may have been prompted by a desire to hear McCarthy's views on [illegible] baseball.

The Coast man came east with charges that William Wrigley owned [illegible] to many clubs in the Coast League, but his statement that he has not seen Landis is accepted at face value here

JOE MINEHAN IN AMATEUR SHOW

The Ausonia Council, K. of C., will stage a big amateur boxing show at Scenic Temple tomorrow night. Jack Reno, who is in charge of the entries, reports that virtually all of the fast steppers among the local boys will be on hand to show their class.

Joe Minehan of Charlestown, one of the best simon-pures to ever be developed hereabouts, will have Joseph Morozzi of Bridgewater as an opponent in the final match of the 147-pound division if both boys fight at their best. When these rivals met recently at the Arena in the inter-city bouts, Morozzi won a close decision. Minehan wants to even the score

There will be bouts for novices at 112, 118 and 125 pounds. The 147-pound class is open, as is the heavyweight division.

Entries should be made with Jack Reno, No. 17 Rutherford street, Charlestown

SCHOENDORF IN BOUT WITH HIRSH

Jack Schoendorf of Milwaukee and Victor Hirsh of Malden will furnish the thrills in the feature bout of ten rounds at the Casino A. C. of Lynn, tonight.

When these battlers clashed at Lynn recently, the decision went to Hirsh after a torrid quarrel. Many of the fans were of the opinion that Schoendorf had the best of the milling and as a result there was quite an uproar after the verdict had been rendered.

Matchmaker Jack Murphy informs us that Schoendorf and Hirsh are both in the best of condition and prepared to step at a lively clip.

Schoendorf is a slightly better boxer than Hirsh. But when it comes to two-handed fighting, the Malden warrior has an edge on his opponent.

Five Million Grid Fans the Record for 1923 Season

New York, Dec. 3 (By A P.).—New attendance records in practically every arena marked the strides taken by the gridiron sport in popularity this year. With close to 1,000,000 attendin the Western Conference games, more than that number accommodated in but five of the larger Eastrn stadia, and generally increased figures elsewhere, it is probable that the total attendance at all college games was close to 5,000,000 for the year.

The University of Pennsylvania, playing all nine of its games at Franklin Field, alone drew close to 400,000, a record probably beyond that of any other institution in the country.

Dedication of several new stadia helped increase attendance totals, the new structures including one at Dartmouth, and another at California, where the seating capacity of close to 78,000 is second only to that in the Yale Bowl. Many other institutions are planning new stands to meet growing demands, notably Illinois, which will dedicate a $2,000,000 structure next year.

Schoendorf and Hirsh will be surrounded by a strong preliminary card.

Buddy Clark of Salem will have plenty of trouble to keep up his winning streak when he tackles Al Lewis of Boston in the semi final. Lewis surprised the talent last Tuesday night by winning from Dennis Glynn at the Arena. Young McAllister of Middleboro and Kid Phippin of Newton meet in a six round preliminary and Young Jeff of Gloucester will try and flop Flip Evans of Salem in [illegible]

SIX TEXAS LEAGUERS IN EVERY GAME

Texas League records show that six players took part in every game played in 1923. They were Clarence Kraft and Morris Tavener of Fort Worth, Bill Huber and Pete Turgeon of Beaumont, Ewell Gross of San Antonio and Kearns of Galveston. Huber and Gross did not miss an inning all season.

DARLING AMONG TOP-NOTCHERS AS GRID STAR

In the final compilation of points made public today, George Pfann, captain and star quarterback of the Cornell eleven, [illegible]ped the Eastern collegiate field in individual scoring with a total of 91 points. Pfann scored 15 touchdowns and 3 goals after touchdown during the season just closed.

Chuck Darling

He between Tryon of Colgate, Hazel of Rutgers and Nardacci of West Virginia resulted in the race for second honors, each scoring 84 points.

Wilson of Penn State, Glennon of Holy Cross, Bowman of Syracuse, Hawan of Dartmouth, Darling of Boston College and Smythe of the Army followed in the order named

by the Veteran Motorist

TWENTY years ago I used to be somewhat of a runner myself, and back in the home town, they still talk about the mile handicap I won at the County Fair in 5:01 flat, on a dirt track, with flat-heel shoes. Some record it was! Until last summer, I thought that I was some runner—until I saw Joie Ray in competition.

Some runner that boy! At the sound of the gun he was off and away from the crowd in the first 100 yards. There he stayed, away up in front, either making the pace or pushing the leader so hard that it was only a question of time before he must break. How Joie did kill off that field and race home a winner, with never a falter, never a break in that marvelous stride.

I have always thought that Socony Gasoline was a good deal like a Joie Ray.

Take it at the start, in the welter of traffic, how quickly it puts you in the lead! How soon you settle down to a strong, tireless pace. How often you pass the other fellow and never see him again; always how powerfully and fast it brings you home to your journey's end.

Taking a car over the road is exactly like running a long distance race. Your gasoline must have a quick start, plenty of pull for the middle stretches, stamina and power for the finish. Socony has them all.

FOUR BIG GAMES CARDED FOR BROWN

Providence, R. I., Dec. 3.—Four big games are on Brown University's football schedule for next Fall. They will be with Yale, Dartmouth, Harvard and Colgate, in that order.

Dr. Marvel said that Harvard would be played in the stadium November 15, 1924. He made this date public, with the consent of the Harvard management, in order to stop stories being circulated that Brown and Harvard would sever relations.

The game with Dartmouth, which brings to an end the three-year agreement between the two colleges, will take place at Hanover on November 1 next.

ICE SEASON TO START WITH TWIN BILL

FRIDAY

B. U. vs. M. I. T.
Harvard varsity vs. Boston Hockey Club.

SATURDAY

(United States League Series)

All teams in the United States Hockey League as well as three local college teams will figure in the hockey opening at the Arena this week. Twin bills in hockey are the custom in mid season, but this year things start with a bank.

There's a doubleheader Friday night with M. I. T. playing B. U. and Harvard varsity meeting Boston Hockey Club.

Championship hockey has its start Saturday night when B. A. A., champions of the United States League, tackles the new Maple A. A. team.

College hockey this season promises to develop great competition. The class of collegiate hockey is in the East and the four local teams, Harvard, Boston College, M. I. T. and B. U. are well equipped to uphold native prestige in the college end.

Harvard will send a team on the ice Friday night that will have speed, power and ability. Ralph Winsor will again have charge of the Crimson. This coaching wizard will get all there is to get out of a hockey team. He is fortunate in having splendid material at his disposal. Harvard draws well from the sophomore class. In addition to this Clark Hodder, who a year ago was ineligible, will be out to share the outer defense with Jack Hammond in the event of Capt. Ted Crosby moving up to the forward line.

Boston fans have heard of mystery hockey teams, but it never has been their fortune to have one in Boston. All teams recruited from across the border have been preceded by a lot of noise. This Maple A. A. team, which tackles the champion Unicorn team Saturday night, has claimed nothing. Its management has assured Manager Brown that a capable team would be on the ice. That's all, nothing more.

Report New Deal With Cubs-Cards-Giants in Making

New York, Dec. 3.—It was reported today in baseball circles that another Hornsby deal, involving the Cardinals, Cubs and Giants was in the process of cooking, whereby the Cardinal ace would pass to New York, in exchange for Charley Hollocher and $100,000. The Giants, it is said, are to obtain Hollocher from the Cubs for Irish Meusel and George Kelly and will pass him on to St. Louis with $100,000 cash for Hornsby.

The latter, according to the report, is to be placed on first base by McGraw. The report did not gain much credence in baseball circles here.

CASEY AND CLEARY TUFTS HOLDOUTS, SAYS RUMOR

Eddie Casey and Walter Cleary, Tufts football mentors who completed one of the most successful seasons in the history of athletics at the Medford college, have not signed up for 1924 yet. Both are holding out on the Brown and Blue and the backers of the Jumbos are in gloom.

Seven victories and two defeats is the 1923 football record. Tufts football followers called the grid campaign a successful one when Tufts triumphed over the Mass Aggies in the final [illegible] of [illegible] season.

Eddie Casey

Casey and Cleary are expected to sign contracts this week, but rumor says that they will not return. Faculty Manager Clarence P. Houston states that both will rejoin the Jumbos next season.

Coach Casey has planted the Harvard system of football in the Tufts grid squad for two years and has done wonders with the material available at the Medford college. Next season the Jumbos are scheduled for eight hard games.

If Casey returns the Medfordites [illegible] through their gridiron calendar with [illegible] of Captain Van Kren [illegible] and five other [illegible] men will return. Many good prospects from the freshman squad will also be on hand.

Walter Cleary

Bill Winer, a transfer from the University of Maine, who played havoc with all opposition while holding down the fullback assignment for the freshman team, will be one of the new backfield stars for the varsity. Dean, True Taylor, Cunningham and [illegible] are the other freshman stars available.

The new teams that will be on the 1924 schedule are University of Maine and New Hampshire. Both games will be played at Tufts Oval. Lowell Textile, Conn Aggies, Middlebury, Wesleyan and Bowdoin are some of the teams on the card.

MILLER HUGGINS TO MAKE FLORIDA TRIP

To this day the report is current that Miss Alexa Stirling took tremendously to heart the stymie that Mrs. W. A. Gavin laid her on the home hole at White Sulphur Springs in last year's national semi-finals. That was no more than she herself did to Mrs. Clarence Vanderbeck on the sixteenth green at Shawnee, four years ago, in the same event. Consequently her rival went to the seventeenth 1 down, a ticklish situation at that stage of the struggle.

CINCINNATI WANTS RUETHER TO RETURN

Cincinnati, Dec. 3.—Local fans are again agitating the purchase of Walter Ruether by the Reds. Squire Ebbets has announced that most of the Brooklyn players are for sale or trade, and has specifically mentioned Ruether as one player he would trade away if any equivalent were offered. The Cincinnati fans want Ruether back and Ruether is eager to return.

GREEK STAR TO TRY TO DOWN TARAMASCHI

Angelo Taramaschi may bend and break horseshoes with his teeth and hold two automobiles, but Charlie Platos, the Greek heavyweight, who meets him in a finish wrestling match at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night, has no fear of the outcome of the match.

Taramaschi

Platos does no mean stunts of strength himself when he takes a good-sized ironbar and bends it across his neck. He also takes a good sized spike and drives it in a board with his fist. But aside from all these feats of strength that they both can perform they are a pair of classy wrestlers.

Taramaschi has made good here with a vengeance and Platos has made a remarkable record in his Western engagements. His countrymen have heard of his ability and will be on hand Thursday night to cheer him to victory against his Italian rival. The match will be best two falls in three to a positive finish.

Fans who have been wondering just how much Jack Albright can really wrestle will have a chance to see at this show, as he is at last matched with a real wrestler. He will meet Pinky Gardner, the phenomenal light-heavyweight star, on this same bill.

LYNCH MEETS COULON IN BANTAM GO

New York, Dec. 3.—As the next step in his campaign to reinstate himself in the good graces of the New York State Athletic Commission, Joe Lynch, world's bantamweight will meet Eddie Coulon of New Orleans in a 12-round no-decision bout at Newark, N. J., tonight.

Joe Lynch.

Lynch is under suspension by the local commission, but hopes to work his way up to a bout with Abe Goldstein, favored as champion in official circles here.

HEILMANN IS A. L. LEADER ONCE MORE

Harry Heilmann, Detroit slugger, topped the American League sluggers last season with an average of .403, according to official figures.

It was the second time in his career that Heilmann topped the [illegible]

Ruth slumped in his hitting towards the end of the season, finishing with an average of .393. Heilmann and Ruth led the procession all season, the latter getting off to a bad start. Heilmann started to slump in mid-season and when the season was about two-thirds over Ruth caught up and passed him, only to lose the lead during the final few weeks.

Practically every record went to players who have stood the gaff for years. Prominently among the star performers were Cobb, Heilmann, Speaker, E. Collins, Ruth and Kenneth Williams. Cobb gained the distinction at the end of the year of completing his eighteenth consecutive year with a batting average of 300 or better.

Tris Speaker of Cleveland set a new American League record in two base hits, the Cleveland player and manager pounding out fifty-nine doubles. Ruth of New York led all in runs, accumulating 151, a fraction under one run per game as he played in 152. A glance at Ruth's all around record explains why the Yankee star was voted the most valuable player of the year. He compiled a total of 399 bases which included forty-five two baggers, three triples and forty-one home runs, the latter total being twelve more than his nearest competitor, Williams of St. Louis.

Eddie Collins' mark of forty-nine stolen bases and thirty-nine sacrifice hits were noteworthy performances.

Cleveland finished at the top among the teams in batting, but it was a close race with Detroit, the former winding up the season with a percentage of .301, only one point ahead of Detroit. New York Yankees, pennant winners and world's champions, were an even ten points behind Detroit, while St. Louis was back another ten points.

The Philadelphia Athletics were unable to keep up the early season's batting clip and finished next to last, Boston winding up the season with a percentage of .261, just forty points behind the leaders, and two points less than in the preceding year. Chicago was midway, with Washington a point above Philadelphia.

Police Commissioner Wilson Says:

"It is very gratifying to hear that the smoking public is appreciating more and more the worth of the Elcho cigar. I am sure that all citizens who have the interest of their city and State at heart are glad to see this Boston product go ahead so fast.

"The growth of a Boston industry not only means increased employment in the city but the stimulation of business generally in the community."—Advt.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

Isn't there too much "viewing with alarm" in this country?

Aren't there satisfactory explanations—solid reasons, even gratifying reasons—for many of the things which excite the questions and the headshaking of the pessimists and alarmists?

Taking up this subject, I recently attempted to set down an answer. Here it is:

Is America spending more than ever before on luxuries, on recreation, on amusement, on tobacco on clothes, on millinery, on shoes, on candy, on flowers, on vacations, on travel?

Is America incurring heavier debts than ever before for the construction of costly roads the establishment of public parks and gardens, the building of fine homes?

The reply: It is.

What is the explanation of all this?

To compare or contrast the America of today with the America of ten years ago or twenty years ago would be like contrasting a railway train with a stage coach.

Most of the things pessimists and alarmists take fright at are simply manifestations of our progress and development as a nation.

We spend more, it is true. But it is equally true that we save more.

We consume more, yes. But we produce more.

We have more luxuries—because we have today more people in a position to afford luxuries.

Many business men and bankers who ought to reason more soundly, have fallen into the habit of comparing current facts and figures and conditions with the facts and figures and conditions prevailing at the peak of the boom caused by the inflation brought by the World War.

Eddies there always have been and always will be in our national prosperity. But the all-important undercurrent is forward and upward.

The value of our manufactures is four times what it was in 1900.

Workers—Persons gainfully occupied—have increased more than 12,000,000 since 1900, and total population has grown nearly 35,000,000.

Bank deposits have multiplied from $7,000,000,000 to $37,000,000,000.

Savings bank deposits have increased 200 per cent., to fully $7,000,000,000.

Bank clearings have gone, since 1900, from under $85,000,000,000 to fully $377,000,000,000.

Petroleum output has more than doubled since 1914, and is nearly ten times what it was in 1900.

Imports of manufacturing material last year were five times the value of the 1900 imports, and total imports have jumped from below $1,000,000,000 to not far from $4,000,000,000.

Our farms were valued at $20,000,000,000 in 1900, contrasted with not far from $80,000,000,000 twenty years later.

Farm products have soared in value from well under $5,000,000,000 to over $21,000,000,000.

Wages paid in manufacturing are more than four times what they were in 1900.

Yes, America is growing.

KRESGE JUMPS TO NEW HIGH FOR YEAR

Prices turned rather heavy in the New York stock market today after making a strong start with call money at 5 per cent, then lowering to 4½. Kresge advanced 2½ to a new 1923 high.

There were losses of 2 or more points in Baldwin and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe.

Point or more setbacks came for American Can, Gulf States Steel, Maracaibo, both Pan-Americans and Stromberg.

At the day's best there were point or more gains for du Pont, Corn Products, Crucible, Maryland, General Asphalt, Computing-Tabulating and American Sugar.

Congress was the cynosure of Wall Street eyes at the start of the new week. Knowing the constructive policy of President Coolidge the financial community was confident that his message would contain many bullish points. This belief was expressed in the buoyant tone in the whole market in the early trading.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has entered into a contract with Technicolor, Inc., whereby the latter will take 1,000,000 feet of positive film in color, work to start about the middle of January in California.

Technicolor, Inc., in which Boston interests have large ownership, has completed its new factory in this city and the equipment installed is being prepared for production.

Wall St. Gossip

AMERICAN Steel Foundries is rumored for dividend increase from $3 to $4 on common Thursday, but President Lamont says he sees no reason for raise.

J. P. MORGAN will return from Europe on Majestic, sailing December 5.

NET EARNINGS of Stromberg in first nine months of 1923 were $810,731, equal to $10.81 a share on 75,000 shares, against $5.05 a share in 1922 period and $1.68 a share in 1921.

BALTIMORE & OHIO has asked for permission to issue $7,000,000 of 5 per cent. equipment trust certificates.

SALES by Copper Export Association in week ended November 21 amounted to 15,322,000 pounds at average price of 13.25 cents a pound.

HUB TRUST COMPANY CHANGES ITS NAME

Hub Trust Company has charged its name to the "Bank of Commerce and Trust Company." President James Solomont says:

"This change has been carefully considered and is made for this reason: The word 'Hub' is much abused by the newspapers. The headline writer uses it when he means to describe 'Events in Boston,' and we are continually seeing some 'Hub Trust or Hub Company in Difficulties.' Of course, in smaller type, the paper goes on to tell the story, but the use of the word 'Hub' in that way will persist, and it is very distasteful to us."

The Hub Trust Company is a member of the Federal Reserve system and the Boston Clearing House Association. It has shown steady and consistent growth since its institution.

HIGH COTTON PRICES CHECK ON SPINNERS

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 3.—Check on textile industry due to advancing cotton is being felt sharply by spinning mills, faced on one hand by buyers who balk at higher prices, on the other by holders of cotton expecting heavy profits through the rising market.

The general manager of a large Chattanooga spinning mill, who has made a trip through the principal textile districts of the South, says cotton is in hands of persons financially able to hold for the top price and not disposed to sell. This condition prevails generally. Spot cotton running 100 to 120 points higher than December is quoted on New York Exchange.

Replies to Investors

(Send inquiries on stocks, bonds or other investment subjects to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor of the Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. Don't buy or sell without the benefit of expert advice. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply. Your inquiry will be held in confidence. We advise with a sincere interest in your personal welfare.)

FREQUENT ADVICE.

To A. L. J., Centre street.—All holders of stocks or bonds, unless competent themselves to follow the markets closely, should get frequent advice regarding what they have, as conditions may change greatly from time to time. Do not be backward about writing often. We are glad to advise you at any time.

CONSOLIDATED TEXTILE.

To I. R. F., Upham's Corner.—The depredations of the boll weevil, affecting the raw cotton situation, have doubtless hampered the prosperity of the Consolidated Textile organization, just as they have that of other cotton mills. The public appears unconvinced that the situation is serious, but it does not seem likely cotton goods will be sold under replacement cost.

PROPOSED PURCHASES.

To A. M., Maxwell street.—We do not approve of your plan of switching your 20 shares of Fisk Rubber to Auto Knitter Hosiery. The latter stock is selling on a basis to yield almost 40 per cent. It has declined more than 300 per cent. so far this year. This shows that Wall Street believes the $1 dividend paid October 15 is likely to be the last.

Of course, your Fisk Rubber pays nothing at all and really is not much less speculative than Auto Knitter, but it represents a bigger and more enduring business, nevertheless, and as a speculative market it has just as good a standing in the game, and probably better. If we were in your place we would hold the Fisk Rubber for better prices. Nor would we advise you to switch to Texas Pacific Coal & Oil.

FINDS 1,000 SHARES

To J. C., Valley street.—This acknowledges receipt of your letter with which you enclose a certificate for 1,000 shares of stock in the Pine Tree Silver Mining Company of the State of Maine, issued in 1883. You state that your little boy found this stock while playing in the street. It is of no value. In order that we might definitely advise you in this matter we consulted Smyth's "Obsolete American Securities & Corporations," volume II., which says: "Pine Tree Silver Mining Company. Incorporated in Maine. Date 1880. No sale for. [illegible]" We are returning the certificate.

TOO LITTLE INFORMATION

To F. M., Bromfield street.—You would have simplified our task of advising you if you had told us why you wanted the information on Texas Company and Pacific Mills. Are you a potential investor, or are you thinking of putting money into these stocks? We suspect that you are contemplating the purchase of either one or both of these issues from a speculative viewpoint.

However, we are going to ask you if you will not be good enough to write us another letter and take us more into your confidence by indicating the amount of money that you have available for investment, your age, your business, whether you have investments made, etc. It will then be very much easier for us to proceed along constructive lines. Perhaps neither one of the issues you refer to would be what we would consider a desirable purchase for you.

WOOLEN PFD.

To N. T. P., Hull.—There is nothing in the provisions of American Woolen preferred or in the company's financial and earnings position that would prompt us to exclude a small block of the stock from the holdings of a man not dependent upon it for income. This statement, however, is not to be taken as a blanket recommendation covering the safety requirements of all classes of investors.

PENNSYLVANIA BELL.

To T. N. H., Gloucester.—Bell Telephone of Pennsylvania has recently completed arrangements to sell 6½ per cent. cumulative preferred stock to customers in its territory. It is a high grade preferred stock.

STRIKES.

To L. N. F., Harlow street.—Strikes are apt to be expensive for both sides. Cost of the two nation-wide strikes of the Summer of 1922 as they affected individual carriers is strikingly shown in the comparative earning figures of the New York Central for the third quarter of 1922 and 1923. The company's surplus later charges for the three months in 1923 amounted to $14,187,955, against but $1,756,750 in the corresponding period a year ago.

New York, Dec. 3.—The cotton market broke 74 points shortly after the opening today. March contracts were down to 36 cents or $5.50 a bale from the recent high. Increased crop estimates by private authorities caused a general unloading movement following weakness in the Liverpool market.

ANNOUNCEMENT

CHANGE OF NAME

HUB TRUST COMPANY

OFFICERS:

Chairman of Board, CHARLES R. SMITH
President, JAMES SOLOMONT
Vice Presidents, ERNEST L. ADAMS, HENRY H. LEARNARD
Treasurer, FRANK J. CARENS
Asst. Treasurers, ANDREW N. DORE, GEORGE L. CONNOR

FREQUENT and unwarranted use of the word "Hub" by head-line writers when referring to "Boston" has from time to time occasioned us considerable annoyance. For this reason, after careful consideration and with the consent and approval of the Commissioner of Banks, we have decided to change the name of this bank to the following:

BANK OF COMMERCE & TRUST COMPANY

FORMERLY HUB TRUST CO

28 TREMONT ST. BOSTON

We pledge ourselves that the change will be in name only; the same ideals of safety-plus-service that have contributed to the upbuilding of this bank, will be retained intact.

ARE you interested in prosperity for American business in 1924? Merchant, banker or wage earner, of course you want to see "good times." The Financial Editor of the Boston American suggests you can "do your bit" in peace, just as you did in war.

Write now to both your United States Senators and the Congressman from your district. Tell them all you favor Secretary Mellon's program for tax reduction.

HALTS 40-FOOT CHANNEL IN HARBOR

Washington, Dec. 3.—No money will be available for further work on the forty-foot channel from the sea to Boston Harbor during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, according to annual report of the chief of engineers, United States Army.

Although he recommends an appropriation of $40.00 for maintenance work in the entire Boston Harbor, he says with reference to the channel: "As there is apparently no present need for the prosecution of the forty-foot project, no additional funds need be available at the present time."

At the request of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the rivers and harbors committee will consider legislation designed further to improve during the coming fiscal year Boston Harbor, upon which the Federal government has expended more than $18,641,000 to date.

In connection with Boston Harbor the chief of engineers' report says: "The terminal facilities of Boston Harbor are considered adequate for existing commerce and ample space exists for their extension to meet future demands."

Work on the country's rivers, harbors and waterways will require $48,328,645 during the year beginning July 1, 1924, according to recommendations made in the report $40,828,865 FOR YEAR.

For general river and harbor work for the fiscal year of 1925 the chief of engineers says $42,828,045 can be profitably expended. Estimates for the year which ended June 30, 1923, for this work were $47,478,217 and appropriations for the present year were $46,156,910, of which $46,624,410 had been allotted.

The Mississippi River receives the largest share of recommended appropriations for this year, its total, including work of the Mississippi River Commission, aggregating

NEW ENGLAND WATERWAYS.

New England waterways will require the following: Rockland harbor, Maine, $15,000; Boston harbor, Massachusetts, $40 000; Beverly harbor, Massachusetts $45,000; Pollock Rip Sloals, Nantucket Sound, Massachusetts, $100,000; harbor of refuge, Nantucket, Mass., $42 000 Providence River and harbor, Rhode Island, $150,000; harbor of refuge, Block Island, R. I., $10 000; Thames River, Connecticut, $47,000; Connecticut River below Hartford, $40,000; Bridgeport harbor, Connecticut, $42,000; Norwalk harbor, Connecticut, $125 000.

NEED MORE AUTOS TO CARRY VETS

About fifty additional machines of ordinary casualty will be required to transport the disabled veterans from the various hospitals throughout Greater Boston to the Colonial Theatre as theit performance in aid of the disabled men tomorrow after-

While the response has been generous, there is still a shortage and, unless more autos are forthcoming, many of the men will be unable to attend the performance. All that is required will be to take the men from the Chelsea Naval or Marine Hospitals, the Soldiers Home in Chelsea, or the West Roxbury Hospital at about 1 o'clock, reach the theatre and then call for them at 5 o'clock.

The total time required will not be more than two hours. The affair is given by the Community Service for the Christmas benefit for the veterans. Persons desiring to send cars are communicating with Harold D. Bernstein Kenmore 7300 during the day, and at Centre Newton 0395 during the night

USING MAILS TO SELL T. B. SEALS

Selling of Christmas seals is taken largely away from street and office building canvassers this year. The Boston Tuberculosis Association is using the mails instead. Seals have been mailed to individuals in all parts of the city.

However, to accommodate those who wish to buy at a stated place, booths are opened today in various parts of the city and for several days young women will sell them in hotel lobbies.

Beginning today the seals will be on sale in the corridors of the general postoffice, at substations and other locations. A large special committee headed by Miss Alice G. Edwards, No. 1471 Beacon street. An other will have charge of publicity work. Dr. George S. Bill is chairman of the general committee.

Miss Bernice W. Billings and others will address various organizations, beginning this week

Postal authorities request that users of seal place them on the backs of envelopes to avoid confusion in the service.

AMERICA WILL GET NO NEW CARDINALS

Rome, Dec. 3 (I.N.S.)—No new American cardinals will be created by the next consistory, it was announced today at the Vatican. Two additional Italian cardinals will be the only ones named, it was announced today.

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars is to be spent at once by the newly organized company, in building the necessary specially constructed courts, stands and building at Hialeah, close proximity to the Miami Jockey Club race track and the Miami Kennel Club.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Largest Evening Circulation in New England—December 3, 1923

Give Boston the praise, It is the only city that can show so much for the size of its population that is the envy of other cities.—Edward Garrity, Q. M. C

Price Does Make a Difference

But QUALITY Makes a Great Deal More Difference

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

Ray Long, editor; J. A. Moore, general manager, and Annenberg, dynamo in the circulation end, request you to take off your hat while they tell you: "We have just finished printing 1,338,000 of the COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE FOR DECEMBER."

The three young men above, and several hundred others that help to make Cosmopolitan Magazine, say to you: "Observe, ladies and gentlemen, 1,034,000 American citizens march up to the newsstands clerk. They see scattered around ten, twenty, fifty magazines at cheap prices, from five cents up to fifteen and twenty cents. And each one of the 1,034,000 citizens passes by the CHEAP magazines and puts down his 35 cents for one copy of the COSMOPOLITAN. Why? For the simple reason that in America intelligent people know real VALUES and they prefer quality to mere cheapness.

It is natural for these young men of Cosmopolitan to exult. A circulation of 1,338,000 copies for a magazine selling AT THIRTY-FIVE CENTS a copy is remarkable and unprecedented. And yet when you continue reading the proud announcement of the young editor and managers, you wonder that their circulation is not ten millions instead of 1,338,000.

They offer you in the way of humor, Irvin Cobb, George Ade, Wodehouse, Montague Glass, McIntyre and John McCutcheon, all in one issue. They offer you a novel by Peter B. Kyne, and a short story by Rupert Hughes, in which business is made romantic.

They give you a story of adventure by Curwood, love stories by Ford, Brown, Adams, Kathleen Norris. All in that one copy of Cosmopolitan.

And then PROBLEMS. Do you care for problems? Gouverneur Morris in Cosmopolitan has a novel that is to problem what Mount Everest is to mountains.

And Crystal Eastman, very young but very wise married lady, in her psychological study, "Marriage Under Two Roofs," makes even Gouverneur Morris' complicated problem novel look as simple as the first two steps in the multiplication table.

Then there is Arthur Somers Roche on mystery. But your mind comes back to "Marriage Under Two Roofs." What's that like? Does the lady live under one roof and the gentleman under another; do they meet under a third roof, or out "under the wide and starry sky," or in Central Park, New York city, or in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado? Or, perhaps, did the lady and the gentleman live under each of the two roofs?

Anyhow, the program that COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE offers makes it clear that the circulation management has nothing to brag about. Instead of selling 1,338,000 Cosmopolitan magazines at 35 cents each, it ought to sell at least twice as many now, and four times as many next year. That's the opinion of an aged, experienced and exacting editor.

Let Wealth Pay?

Certainly, but It DOESN'T Pay

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

A pious thought, but the man with the very gigantic income DON'T pay the high surtaxes.

The REALLY big incomes, as one of the very richest men in America remarked to this writer, DON'T PAY THE INCOME TAX, AND THEY NEVER WILL.

They are able to hire lawyers that can tell them how to avoid that unpleasant payment.

In all the United States there is only one annual income of five million dollars reported. Yet there are individuals in the United States whose income amounts to ten times and twenty times five million dollars a year. What becomes of the surtaxes on those gigantic incomes. Uncle Sam DOESN'T and WON'T get it.

Ask the lawyers, and those that do the taxing in such a way as to protect corporations, and thus save the really big fortune from really high taxation.

Mr. Mellon's effort, with which every citizen and Congressman should co-operate, is to put the taxes on a sane basis, first of all by reducing the cost of government.

His plan would cut down the taxation on small incomes to a greater extent than big incomes. Above all, what is wanted is a tax that could really be collected, not a tax for people to TALK about and not pay.

The gross income of the United States is at least fifty billion dollars, probably nearer one hundred billions. Four or five per cent. on that amount would be more than enough to run the government if the government knew how to collect it, and such collection wouldn't injure or seriously annoy anybody. This would not interfere with business or drive men that have money into buying only tax-exempt securities, instead of putting their money into new enterprises that would develop the country and employ labor.

"Why Did You Pay Those Yankees?"

Baldwin May Find It Hard to Answer

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

The opponents of Baldwin, British Premier, attack him for his settlement of Britain's debt to America. Had he waited and evaded, say his enemies, the United States would have been glad to make much easier terms. As it is, Britain must pay this country forty million pounds a year, and that seems very sad.

England has just completed the world's fastest submarine fighter. It travels 33 knots on the surface—a racing speed, and carries six five-inch guns—a regular submersible battleship.

With the money that Britain "wastes" in paying us part of what she owes she could build many such submarines. It is sad, to pay.

PRIZES FOR GUESS ON VOTES

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa.—When Hiram Plasterer became a candidate for director of the poor in Franklin County he announced he would award six floral prizes to the persons who came nearest guessing the total number of votes he would receive in the election. Plasterer is a florist and in addition to the prizes also issued little booklets giving advice on how to grow flowers. His campaign methods attracted considerable attention and he was elected. He has awarded all the promised prizes, ranging from two dozen chrysanthemums to twelve flowers of other varieties.

Just because a jay walker is suddenly aroused from his dreams by the loot of a horn he blames the automobilist—never a sign of gratitude for what was perhaps the salvation of another life.

"Make Women Stand"

Editor Boston American:

First—Force the women to enjoy equality, as it is a present-day clamor.

Third—By compelling them to stand they will give a welcome cue to a movement for municipal ownership, etc., and we can enlist them in the cause for betterment.

Fourth—Women never give their seats to other women, and will sprawl themselves and their vanity cases over the two-seated seats.

Fifth—Women never work as hard as do the men, and the gadders and window shoppers should go home in time to cook supper. F. B.

Clothing Asked for Four

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please allow me a little space in your paper. I have been in the hospital for two months with throat trouble. My voice is completely gone and am only able to speak in a whisper. I would be very thankful for any article of clothing. I need a coat very badly and shoes size 5½. The doctor says to be out in the air all I can, but as my clothes are not very good I am unable to be out much. I have a little boy, six years old, I would be thankful for some clothes for him, he needs a coat and some shoes, size 11. My husband is having very little work, so we are unable to get what we need. I would also be thankful for some infant clothes, age three months I hope I am not asking too much. The Helping Hand is doing wonderful work for poor people. I read it every night. It is my first time asking charity. L. D.

Asks Help for Boy

Editor Helping Hand:

I have frequently read the columns of "The Helping Hand" and I wonder if you can find some person who is interested in education to be of assistance. I am interested in an Italian boy, aged seventeen, whose parents are good, but illiterate and ignorant, and who turn the boy out to punish him for his youthful indiscretions, which are not particularly serious. I had tried to get him to attend a trade school, but there are obstacles in the way which I wish could be removed. He is not particularly successful in obtaining work, or keeping it, and he says the difficulty at home, his environment and companions are not the best.

I have established him, since the last time he was put out, in a room, with an elderly American woman, at a cost of $4.00 per week, and this tends to remove him from close association with his companions. I am willing to furnish him, also, with sufficient money for recreation and clothing, but further than that I cannot go.

Is there some reader who would furnish say perhaps $7.00 per week that the boy could eat nourishing food in a restaurant and thus attend trade school. I would furnish a report of his attendance from the school superintendent.

The boy is seventeen, and either now something must be done, or he will gradually become a criminal. I believe overcoming evil with good is a very practical thing, and that is what I wish to do. E. G. M.

Family Deserted

Editor Helping Hand:

I am writing you this letter to ask you if you could help me and my five small children. My husband has deserted us and cannot be found. We are practically destitute for clothing. The children haven't any shoes or heavy clothing. I have to keep them indoors all the time. My little boy has missed school for two months for need of clothes. Any little help from you will be very much appreciated. My children's ages are from one to six. I myself wear size 38 or 40. Thanking you very much.

MRS. M. L.

Editor Helping Hand:

If you know of any mother who would like the enclosed list, please tell her to call any morning or any evening after six: One long, full, black skirt; one long black Fall coat, about size 40; one boy's overcoat, sixteen or seventeen years; one navy blue serge dress, for girl thirteen or fourteen; two pairs Winter drawers, two union suits, four petticoats, one white skirt, blouses and pieces for doll or patch work. MRS. K. D. P.

Thanks very much. We have several requests for these articles and will forward the address of a deserving mother.

Home Asked for Children

Editor Helping Hand:

A woman left with two children would like assistance, her husband deserted her some time ago. Will some kind woman take my two children to board at reasonable price as I work every day. MRS. J. W.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON THE STRANGE STAR MIRA

By Garrett P. Serviss

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

IN the constellation of the Whale (Cetus), the largest in the heavens, which is to be seen in the southern quarter of the sky during the evenings of November, is the wonderful star, Mira, called by astronomers o Ceti, the "o" standing for the Greek letter omicron. The word Mira means wonderful, and its application to this star is appropriate, for in some respects it is the most extraordinary object in the sky.

Its light is changeable to an astonishing degree, and it is the type star of the "long-period variables." At least half the time it is invisible to the naked eye, lingering around the ninth magnitude, or below. Suddenly it begins to brighten, as if it were a growing fire, and it brightens and brightens until it peeps faintly above the level of the sixth magnitude, which is commonly regarded as the limit of naked-eye visibility. Steadily it grows brighter, and passes in succession the fifth, the fourth and sometimes the third magnitude, attaining on rare occasions the second, or even approaching the first.

This increase of brightness lasts about three months, but, having once reached a maximum, the star remains there for a week or two, and then begins to decline, running down the scale often more rapidly than it mounted, until it disappears from the naked-eye vision, though it never gets below the reach of telescopes. Its average minimum brightness is around magnitude 10½.

IS GIGANTIC SUN.

Now, Remembering that this strange star is a sun, an eccentric and gigantic brother of our own sun, it is interesting to know what such changes of magnitude correspond to in terms of human sensation. How much, in the ordinary sense of the word, does the sun Mira brighten when it rises from say, the ninth to the second magnitude all in three months' time? Well, each star magnitude is about two and a half times brighter than the next below it.

From the ninth magnitude up to the second there are seven steps involving successive increases of brightness in the ratio of about 2½ to 1. It is usual to deal with this by the aid of logarithms. Thus we find that the difference of brightness arising from a change of seven magnitudes is represented by the logarithm 2.8, to which the corresponding natural number is 631. So, in rising seven magnitudes Mira increases in brightness 631 times. But if a meteor often happens, it does not rise above the third magnitude the increase of brightness is only 251 times.

Imagine the brightness of our sun increasing in a few months even only 100 times. Consider, too, that the increase of heat when Mira periodically blazes up is probably in about the same ratio as the increase of light and then you can picture the effects that would be produced upon planets circling around that extraordinary star. It is to be hoped that Mira never had any planets—at least not inhabited ones.

HAS BRILIANT HUES

But if it were possible for astronomers to live and observe on a planet belonging to Mira what sights they would see, what books they would write, and what theories they would invent! Even from the vast distance of their observatories on the earth the spectacle that their instruments reveal when Mira is glowing in its fullest splendor is magnificent with brilliant spectral hues.

Just now the wonderful star is below the naked-eye range and near its minimum. So, as the huge constellation of the whale sweeps slowly across the meridian, tail first, as if backing away from Orion, coming up in the east and flashing in his starry mail, the neck of the monster is not adorned, as it was a few months ago, with the reddish rays of the great variable. But in the observatories keen eyes continue to watch it, seeking its secrets, and a few days ago the announcement came from Professor Aitken of the Lick Observatory that he had discovered Mira to be a binal double star. The companion is of a bluish color (Mira tending to red) and about half a magnitude fainter than the variable itself. The estimated distance between them is about one second of an arc. The distance of Mira from the solar system is probably at least 400 trillions of miles, so that the news of its ups and downs, brought to us by light waves, is always seventy years behind time.

HEROINES OF HISTORY

The Foolish Queen Who Became a Wanderer

By MARK STUYVESANT

THE so-called "new woman" who possesses in such marked degree the courage of her convictions that she is willing to brave public criticism for the sake of putting her beliefs into effect is usually regarded as a product of the current day.

But she is not.

Ever so long ago back in the early sixteen hundreds—a girl baby was born into the royal house of Sweden who was destined to become more aggressively "modern" than any woman of this century has dared to be.

For not only did she follow her "convictions" so far as to resign place and power, but she even found courage to make herself ridiculous [illegible] to prove a strange sincerity of disposition.

Christina of Sweden was the only surviving child of Gustavus Adolphus. Because of the solid and masculine education she received she became to be, while still a girl, specially impatient of the etiquette of courts.

And since she was placed on the throne when but seven years old, she had plenty of opportunity to grow up self-willed, arrogant and impatient.

To offset these qualities, however, she possessed the charms of gayety, frankness and generosity, so winning the confidence and love of her people.

Since she would have no Prime Minister, she herself administered most of the business of State. And incidentally she encouraged the arts of her country by patronizing artists and literary men, though she showed aversion to members of her own sex.

Many royal suitors tried for her hand, but she appeared to believe that she might care for the interests of her people better with no consort. And indeed she helped to accomplish such important events as the Peace of Westphalia, which confirmed Sweden in the possession of many important countries.

Christina finally came to believe that she could do Gustav would prove a better ruler than herself, and abdicated in his favor.

Then she immediately offset this noble gesture by the ridiculous one of assuming male attire.

After a visit to Brussels, where she abjured the Lutheran faith and joined the Roman Catholic Church, Christina went to Rome, where she received splendid hospitality from the Pope. She then visited the court of Louis XIV. and was received with royal honors.

But her masculine attire and her violation of the proprieties disgusted the people. Feeling ran so high after a member of her suite had been murdered by her order that she was compelled to leave the country.

First she returned to Rome, where she quarreled with the Pope. Finally she fell into such disrepute that even the people of Sweden treated her coldly when she returned to her own land.

THINGS TO THINK ABOUT

By BRUNO LESSING

"Ex-Convict Shoots Self While Visiting Woman"

No reason given. There may be romance behind it or merely sordid detailing. And, accepting the woman and the ex-convict's friends, nobody cares.

Well! Well! The Pullman Company should have a rule forbidding its porters to bite female passengers on the leg.

"Husband Cut Off With $1, Contests $250,000 Will."

There is all you need to know about an unhappy marriage. You can easily imagine the rest. Usually it is a mistake for a man to marry a woman who has a quarter of a million dollars to bequeath unless he is pretty well-to-do himself. Usually, mind you, not always. But, as long as the money belonged to the wife and she thought so little of her husband as to leave him only $1, why, the best thing for him to do is to take the dollar and keep quiet about it.

"Lad Unshaken in Death Story."

That is an interesting story about the testimony of a fifteen-year-old boy who calmly told the story of how his father shot his mother. The boy's name is Aristophanes Mataangas. How many people ever heard of the Aristophanes after whom he was named?

STELLA DALLAS By Olive Higgins Prouty

New and Intensely Interesting Serial of a Marriage of an Educated Man to an Untutored Woman

HOW THE STORY STARTED

Stella Dallas and her husband, Stephen, do not live together. They have a daughter, thirteen years old, named Laurel, who stays most of the year with the mother. These two are now at a Summer hotel in New England, where the other guests look askance at the painted, overdressed elder woman. The time has come for Laurel to visit her father in New York. He meets her at the station and takes her to a hotel. She goes to visit Mrs. Morrison.

By OLIVE HIGGINS PROUTY

"IS there anything in the world softer than the petal of a pansy!" remarked Mrs. Morrison, pressing one of the flowers against her lips and gently drawing it across them.

"The end of a horse's nose is as soft," she said contemplatively, "and," she went on, eyes still closed, "the back of a little baby's head, where they'll let you kiss it."

Mrs. Morrison broke into a laugh.

"Dear delightful Laurel! That's us! That's so!" And suddenly she took hold of one of Laurel's hands and drew the back of that, too, across her lips, and kissed it.

That playful little kiss of Helen Morrison's on the back of Laurel's hand made Laurel's world whirl round her giddily for a moment. No one had ever kissed her on the hand before! It was a caress entirely different from an ordinary kiss upon the lips. She felt exalted, like a young knight in armor before his lady. She wished she dared kneel on the ground and kiss the hem of Mrs. Morrison's dress.

Laurel wondered a great deal about Mrs. Morrison's husband, and finally one day concluded to inquire about him.

"Is your husband away on business?" she began politely.

"Why, no. Didn't you know? Didn't your father tell you?"

"He is not living, Laurel," gently Mrs. Morrison announced.

"Oh," said Laurel. "Of course," she went on, "I knew he wasn't really away on business, because of the drawers in the chiffonier being perfectly empty, and the closet beside yours, too, where you hung my things. But I didn't see any pictures of him around, so I thought perhaps you were separated."

She had studied the portrait. The man in the portrait looked like a grandfather! He had long drooping mustaches, almost white, and the sockets of his eyes hung down like the eyes of a hunting hound, Laurel had seen in the Maine woods once.

"Yes. Why?"

"He looks too old for you!"

"Does he? Well, he was older, but, oh, eyes so kind, and the father of my dear boys, and," she added after a pause, "the father of my little girl, too."

"Your little girl?"

"Yes, Laurel, my own little girl. She died before she was old enough to walk without holding tight onto one of my fingers."

"Why was her name?"

"Carol."

"How old would she be?"

"About as old as you, I think."

"Did she have light hair, or dark?"

"Dark."

"Curly?"

"No, straight. Oh, how we did try to make it curl," laughed Mrs. Morrison.

None of the boys acknowledged that they liked Laurel

"But I guess she didn't have freckles," said Laurel.

"Not then. But I think she would have had, when she grew up. She liked the sun, and outdoors. I'd think level to have had her have ever so freckly a nose."

As easily as that, they wandered into the holy of holies of Helen Morrison's heart, and wandered out again.

When Mrs. Morrison had helped Laurel unpack her trunk on the first afternoon, she had been doubtful as to how her athletic young ones would get along with the little spick-and-span, handbox girl she rather guessed Laurel to be. There were no stout boots, nor rough clothes of any sort among Laurel's things.

"There was a bathing suit, but it was an elaborate fragile affair made of black satin, trimmed with orange. Excellent for exhibition on the beach, but it didn't look very appropriate for use in a certain deep black swimming-hole which the boys had discovered between two barnacled rocks. However, she needn't have worried.

The first night after dinner Con had inquired of Laurel, "Do you ride?"

It seemed there was a stable back of the house.

"I ride some."

"Can you swim?" Dane had asked.

"I swim a little."

To Mrs. Morrison's amazement, to the boys' amusement, too—and to their admiration besides—Laurel's "some" and "little" proved a great deal.

Next morning dressed in an old knickerbocker suit of Dane's, Laurel had never needed her riding clothes in New York before), after she had ridden four or five times around the paddock back of the stable, she had called out, "Does he jump?" and the next time around she had taken one of the hurdles with perfect ease and familiarity.

It was the same with swimming. It didn't matter if her suit was satin, the swimming-hole didn't daunt her. She had taken riding-lessons since she was tight. She had taken lessons in every sport which her mother considered fashionable and in which instructions could be bought.

"The funny thing is," said Con to Laurel the second day, "you don't play tennis."

But in games which required partners, Laurel had got bad much experience. Solitaire sports were her specialty. However, she was pretty good at golf, she told Con. There had usually been a professional at the links connected with the Summer hotels which her mother patronized.

"We'll try it," said Con, "and I'll teach you tennis."

He wouldn't acknowledge that he liked Laurel. None of the boys went as far as that. "But she isn't silly, and she isn't afraid of things," he told his mother.

"They get along together beautifully, Stephen," said Helen Morrison to Laurel's father the night he came to take Laurel away.

It was after dinner. They were sitting in the garden terrace just outside the big room, where the portrait hung. Through the open windows, unattained towards the terrace, they could see Laurel seated with the two older of the boys at a table, busy over some sort of game with cards, with Michael stretched out comfortably at their feet.

Enjoyed Every Moment

"I've enjoyed every moment of her," Helen went on, gazing fondly at the group inside the room. "Only," and there was a sudden change in her voice, "it's brought home to me afresh what I've missed—all these years. Oh, we've had such fun together!" she broke off gaily. "Girls' sort of fun," she laughed; "doing each other's hair, for instance—trying on each other's hats—that sort of thing. Boys—well, I couldn't understand. And her questions! Don't you love little girls' blunt questions? Darling things, I think, like awkward little colts and calves—oh, Laurel's a dear child, Stephen. I've kept pretending she was mine," she exclaimed loyally.

"Oh, Helen! If she only were!"

There wasn't a trace of lightness in Stephen's exclamation.

"I wouldn't have equipped her any better for the present-day activities of a young girl's life than her own mother has done, Stephen," said Helen. "There doesn't appear to be a muscle or a bone in her body that has been neglected."

"I'm thinking about her soul," Stephen remarked.

"It hasn't lost any of its beauty yet, Stephen," Helen assured him. "She's as unspoiled a little girl as I know—so pleased—so genuinely pleased, you can tell by the shine in her eyes—at the least kindness or attention. And the combination in her sophistication and innocence is a source of constant surprise to me—a source of constant joy, too. Oh, you needn't be afraid. So far the undesirable influences haven't hurt Laurel a bit."

"Oh I know, I know," agreed Helen; "I've thought of that, too. It's a pity. I'm so sorry, Stephen. Let her stay with me often—whenever you can. See them in there—all so happy. Don't take her to a hotel when she comes for the visit. Bring her to me here, or to the town house, if we've moved in."

Driving back to New York that night over the almost deserted road (it was late. "Very late for thirteen," Mrs. Morrison had laughed, as he had tucked Laurel into a warm coat of her own), Laurel sat beside her father like a little stone image for the first ten minutes.

There was something exciting about the beautiful coat that wrapped her round so close. It was a little as if Mrs. Morrison herself held her, wrapped her round in her kindness. Every once in a while Laurel would rub her cheek against the soft fur of the high collar.

Like Flower Garden

It felt like Mrs. Morrison's hair the day after it had been washed, and she had let Laurel brush it, and twist it up, and stick the hairpins in. It smelled like it, too—fresh, clean like a flower garden after rain. Laurel drew in great deep breaths of the soft brown sable. "It's Mrs. Morrison," she pretended with all the sentimentality of thirteen.

Gazing up into the sky from out of the fur collar, Laurel could see the full round moon above her. "She's following me to New York," she made believe. "She's going to follow me wherever I go, always and always, and I can look up at her and see her whenever the moon is full, and tell her how lovely I think she is, and try to be like her. I shan't care so much if people are horrid after this."

"All right."

"Was it very terrible?"

"Not very."

"How did you like the boys?"

"All right."

What Is the Effect Upon the Two and Especially Upon Their Strange and Beautiful Child Laurel?

WHO SAID IT AND WHERE

Robert Pollock (1788-1827), a Scotch religious poet, speaks in these terms in his poem, "The Course of Time," of one who had betrayed his trust as a preacher.

From "Hamlet," the storehouse of epigrams comes this saying. If we would be witty, we must strive for brevity.

"Call a spade a spade."

Our familiar expression for outspoken frankness is not as modern as it seems. Plutarch, first century of our era, says of a barbarian general that he never hesitated to "call a spade a spade."

"Slaves to custom."

These words used so often in speaking of convention-bound people appear in Cowper's poem "Proclivities," in which he warns against making children "slaves of custom and established mode."

WHAT THE STARS SAY

LUCKY DAY TO INVEST

THE astral influences for this day seem to make for a change or journey of an unplanned or an unexpected nature. This may be brought about by the connivance or assistance of good friends and should result in substantial advantage, with increase of business and funds as well as advancement of position. There is bad sign, however, admonishing caution and a degree of preparedness against fraud or betrayal. To meet this treacherous situation, the mind must be steady and keen.

It is a lucky day to invest. Tomorrow will be a lucky day for travel.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

TO my surprise, Jim didn't second the motion of inviting our guests to dinner. He stood still and shot at me with a strange lack of expression and even of interest on his face, as though avoiding our eyes collectively and individually.

"That would be most interesting!" began Miss Gregory, with an undercurrent that sounded like irony in her voice.

Ann Lisle

But Mrs. MacAvey's warmer tones broke in crisply:

"You've forgotten, my dear, that this wasn't the errand of mercy Mrs. Harrison takes for granted." Then turning to me, she added: "We didn't drive in merely to convey Jim flattering as that might be to his masculine conceit. We came in for the week's work and to meet my husband and the Count and Countess for dinner at the club. So, you see, we can't stay."

It seemed to me that Mrs. MacAvey's eyes met Jim's almost commandingly and that they had a shade of defiance as she swept Ruth Gregory into an encompassing look. Jim bowed without making any comment. Miss Gregory laughed a low ripple of annoyance and said lightly:

An Amazing Memory

"You have an amazing memory, Gracie. I always take the amusement nearest at hand and don't trouble about the consequences."

When the door of our apartment closed behind us I was on the verge of making a laughing reference to the coincidence of our just managing to meet in front of the building, but Jim forestalled me with a rampage.

"Now what in blazes made you go and do that?"

"Most you like that, in front of the building?" I cried. "It was a strange coincidence, sure enough!"

"Oh, that!" Jim waved his arm, dismissing it and working himself up into a frenzy in tune with the movement of his hands. "But what under the sun made you do a fool thing like asking them in to dinner? Such a performance was entirely uncalled for."

"Why, Jim!" I protested. "They are your friends. They've been entertaining you over the week-end and taking care of you during your illness. What else could I do when I happened to meet you right at our own door at dinner-time. There had to be some recognition of their consideration in bringing you into town this way."

"Couldn't you leave me to make it?" stormed Jim. "Do you always have to try to run things regardless of whether you know a darn thing about the steering gear or where the machine's going to head if you leave your hand off?"

"I thought it was the woman's part"—I began humbly. "But it only considerate in return for hospitality. I didn't think there was anything to do"—

Cruel Words

"It was about the last thing any woman with sense would have done," muttered Jim. "Miss Ruth Gregory always any hankering for your society? Or Grace, either? If she hadn't pulled you out of a hole with her story about the club we'd all be having a sweet time."

"Why, Jim!" I cried, recovering my sense of dignity as his words lashed me too cruelly for endurance. "I was polite because these women who haven't been any too courteous to me are your friends. I tried to do the gracious thing. And now you reproach me as if I had done a criminal act. Why are your so anxious to keep me from these friends of yours?"

I stopped and measured Jim slowly. Then I voiced the thought which burned in my mind:

"Jim, are you ashamed of me?"

"Of all the fool questions!" stormed Jim, thurning on me with a brusque laugh which had in it an unsteady note. "How can a woman like you suggest that a man could be ashamed of her? You're getting to be a personage in the advertising world. I suppose the day's coming when I'll be known as Mrs. Anne Harrison's husband."

"Jim, please!" I said wearily. "Don't offer me futile compliments to make up for the fact that you're having me in every attitude and intonation. But let's not talk about me. Tell me how you feel. Would you like your dinner in bed or are you well enough to come to the table?"

SECRETS OF HEALTH

DO YOU PLAY GOLF?

By Charles A. L. Reed, M.D.

"DO you play golf?" I asked a man in industrial employment.

His reply must be the reply of thousands upon thousands of others situated as you may be and as the woman who need golf—yes, need it.

Dr. Reed.

I say need it, because you need some sort of recreative sport, and because golf is probably the best sport that has come into American life.

It gets you out of doors and into the open.

Occupation in office, shop, factory or on the farm, is either sedentary with comparatively little exercise of the muscles, or laborious with excessive exercise of particular muscles.

In either event there is a certain degree of some if not all the muscles with a resulting loss of their strength and an accumulation of poisons in the system with more or less exhaustion of brain and nerve energy.

Therefore if you have any of these symptoms consult your physician before taking up golf.

But be sure to mention golf to him.

Ah! I forgot.

Now let me get off a little lecture on political economy, with specific application to you and the community in which you live.

Human happiness, the object of all of us, depends upon health. Health is also the basis of efficiency. Your efficiency depends upon your productive energy. And the maximum health, efficiency, prosperity, success of a community depends upon the maximum efficiency of all the people. The maximum energy of yourself and your neighbors depends upon recharging the batteries as fast as or before they are exhausted.

This is done not by recreation but by re-creation. This means sport—out-of-doors sport.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

A ST. LOUIS woman, who has just been married for the fourteenth time says she is having a difficult job finding the right man. It isn't her fault that she hasn't found him, she's certainly tried hard enough.

AFTER fourteen marriages and thirteen divorces, it's a wonder the city officials don't arrest her for wearing out the courthouse steps.

WEDDING fourteen men requires lots of attention. She spends half of her time in church and the other half in divorce courts.

A WOMAN who goes through so many ceremonies doesn't have much time to herself.

SHE says her latest husband is the ideal man and that they're going to be very happy. This isn't at all encouraging to him, when she's told the same thing to the other thirteen.

THERE'S only one thing for him a to do, stick around as long as possible and then, when she gives him the air, go out and join the rest of the gang.

ONCE-OVERS

BE ASHAMED TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF ANOTHER'S INEXPERIENCE.

You hear persons speak about giving a "curtain lecture" and you have given a few yourself to those near you, but how about giving one to yourself?

Ask yourself tonight what you have done of which you should be ashamed.

Ask yourself if you could look the persons with whom you have had business dealings today fairly and squarely in the eye.

What did you put across today that gave your conscience a twist and a twinge but which you calmed by the thought that the other fellow would do you if he could.

You say if a fellow cannot take care of himself in a business deal he deserves to be fleeced.

How would you feel toward the other fellow if he did you out of a sum of money and laughed up his sleeve because you were so foolish as to let the money go?

You consider yourself merely "shrewd" in a perfectly legitimate business way, but you would not like the sort of treatment you give in business.

Call it by its right name—plain dishonesty—and then be ashamed, so ashamed that you will not take advantage of another's inexperience again.
